May Build a Gas Plant.

The directors of the Electric & Water Company have been considering the proposition of putting in a gas plant here for the purpose of furnishing gas for cooking and lighting purposes, and in order to discover how much of a demand there may be for such a plant they are sending out a number of postal cards to the people of this city to find how many of them care enough about the matter to put in gas in case such a plant is established.

In many cities where there are gas plants in operation a great deal of the cooking is done in summer time with gas, it being a cheap and handy way to do cooking with a minimum of heat and dirt. Of course it is also used quite extensively for lighting, although it is not expected that this part of it would cost much more here on account of the low cost of electricity.

Attorney W. E. Wheelan of this city is being prominently mentioned as a prospective candidate for the office of attorney general at the coming election which occurs next year. Mr. Wheelan has not been interviewed on the subject, and we do not know whether he wants the job or not, but there is no question but what he will be able to handle it all right in case he does get it.

Mrs. Fred Podawiltz died at her home on Tuesday at the age of 81 years. Mrs. Podawiltz had been a resident of this city for many years and was highly respected by all who knew her. The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence and at 3 o'clock from the German Memorial church. Rev. Medtke officiating.

A big company of forty people headed by Miss Carrie Webber have been employed to aid Mr. Sidney in his fun making and the chorus is said to be one of more than average ability.

CITY FATHERS HOLD A SESSION

The regular meeting of the city council was held last night with Mayor Wheelan presiding.

A petition signed by some eighty of the city's tax payers was presented to the council asking for an appropriation of $1000 for the assistance of Riverview Hospital. It seems that the deficit during the past year amounted to about $600, and the physicians of this city who had charge of the institution had voted to close it. There were some, however, who thought that it was worth this amount to the city to be kept in operation, hence the petition. The matter was laid over until the next meeting of the council.

E. P. Arjun was appointed supervisor in the Second ward. In place of Wm. H. Reeves, removed from the city.

Dr. Pommeroy was appointed health officer and inspector of schools to fill vacancy caused by the removal of Dr. Blaustein.

A resolution was passed which embodied the preliminary steps in the widening of Oak Street.

A committee was appointed to make a report at the next meeting of the council for the purpose of discovering the places along the river bank where it would be necessary to make improvements to avoid washouts and similar trouble in case of high water like was experienced here last month. There was some discussion on the matter of the paving material to be used on our streets, and as opinions seemed to differ it was decided to call a meeting of the board of public works in the near future at which time the tax payers of the city would be invited to be present and air their views on the subject.

An ordinance concerning public amusement places was passed which will appear in legal form later.

Jackson-Natwick.

Miss Luella Jackson and Frank J. Natwick were married on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, Rev. Fred Staff of the Congregational church performing the ceremony. They were accompanied by Miss Ruby Natwick, sister of the groom, and Clarence Jackson, brother of the bride. The wedding march was played by Miss Julia Jackson, cousin of the bride. Only the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home. Mr. and Mrs. Natwick left the same evening for the south on a wedding tour. Intending to visit at Chicago, Milwaukee and points in the southern part of the state, and upon their return will make their home on the west side in this city, where they have a new home ready for occupancy.

The contracting parties in this marriage are two of our nice young people, the bride being the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, a teacher by profession and a most estimable young lady. The groom is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Natwick, who has lived in this city all his life, a graduate of our high school and the University of Wisconsin, at which latter place he received his diploma as electrical engineer, a profession which he has since been following, and in which he has made good.

Among the guests present from out of town were Mrs. W. C. Knochel of Escanaba, Miss Jessie Johnson of Columbus and Myron Natwick of Chicago.

The establishment of a Y. M. C. A. building would not be for the use of the school children alone. There are many young men in the city who have passed the school age, or may be compelled to work for a living before they have passed that age, who would be pleased to have such a place in which to spend their spare evenings.

While we do not agree entirely with our correspondent, we publish his communication just as cheerfully as we did. No doubt there are many sides to the matter besides the one we saw, and we will be pleased at any time to publish communications upon the matter.

To Use Trackless Trolley.
Up at Merrill the members of the street railway company are looking into the matter of extending their system by the use of the trackless trolley. This is a street car that travels over an ordinary road driven by means of an electric motor, which obtains its power from a trolley wire overhead.

The wheels of the trucks are equipped with solid rubber tires and are able to turn out for turns or obstructions along the street. They are said to have proven quite successful in some places.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Anderson of Chicago were in the city Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Anderson having come here to meet the stockholders of the Johnson & Hill Company, who had extended to him a proposition of taking charge of one of the departments in their new store. Satisfactory arrangements were made and Mr. Anderson will return here within a short time to take charge of the new position.

About the Boy.

Dear Editor and Citizens of Grand Rapids:—

I was particularly interested in the editorial, which appeared in last week's paper on "A Plan for the Boys." It is about time that someone was making a plea for the boys of Grand Rapids. The average citizen sets up an awful howl because the boys hang out on Daly's corner or the Paul "Shack," but very few are interested in doing anything to remedy the situation.

As I understand the subject, it is not a question as to whether or not the average American boy of high school age should be permitted to get together in the evenings, if he so desires. The subject involves the question of furnishing the boys a better place to meet.

Your suggestion that a Y. M. C. A. be built is excellent in theory, but how many boys of high school age could scrape up the necessary five or ten dollars for membership privileges each year? The problem becomes much simpler than even raising $10,000 for a Y. M. C. A., when one considers the fact that the people of Grand Rapids have placed several thousand dollars into a high school which has an excellent gymnasium in connection. This building and especially the gymnasium is closed nearly every evening in the year. Would it be unreasonable and absurd to ask in behalf of the boys of Grand Rapids that this building be opened in the evening and placed at the disposal of the boys?

The work would have to be under supervision and some expense may be incurred in keeping up such a proposition, but I take it for granted that any fair minded citizen will not begrudge the boys a few dollars spent in this way.

A Grand Rapids Boy.

The above is written by a Grand Rapids boy who has passed thru the different phases of home life here in this city and should know what he is talking about to a certain extent. He realizes the necessity of such an institution but gets cold feet in the same breath and says that it is an impossibility without even giving it a second thought.

He thinks the boys could not scrape up the necessary ten a year. Maybe some of them couldn't, but those that hang around the corner smoking cigarettes, or those that put in their spare time playing pool ought to be able to save enough, if they felt so inclined, to pay their yearly dues. It must be remembered that such institutions are not supported entirely by school children. Many men in a city this size take a great deal of interest in such things and often keep up several membership, asking for nothing in return. There is our most sanguine moment we never had in our mind a vision of a hundred thousand dollar building.

His suggestion that the gymnasium of the high school be thrown open for the use of the boys is all right and it might be used to a certain extent by the high school children, but very much doubt if anybody else would visit it. Then it is possible that many of the high school boys would not care to go back to the school in the evening, after spending the whole day there. We would not blame them if they did not. A high school boy is not a great deal different from his older brother. He is looking for a variety, a change from the regular surroundings that he encounters every day. When he attends school during the day he likes to spend his evenings somewhere else, and nobody can blame him. Then the high school building is so far from the center of town that very few would go up there during the cold season.

The establishment of a Y. M. C. A. building would not be for the use of the school children alone. There are many young men in the city who have passed the school age, or may be compelled to work for a living before they have passed that age, who would be pleased to have such a place in which to spend their spare evenings.

While we do not agree entirely with our correspondent, we publish his communication just as cheerfully as we did. No doubt there are many sides to the matter besides the one we saw, and we will be pleased at any time to publish communications upon the matter.

WILL DEDICATE THEIR NEW CHURCH.

Sunday, November 26th has been designated as the day for dedicating the new Congregational church, and services appropriate to the occasion will be held on that day.

J. D. Nichols of Detroit, a tenor soloist of more than ordinary ability, will assist the choir in their work, and Rev. O. S. Davis, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, will preach Sunday morning. In the evening Rev. Frank Sheldon of Madison will preach. Mr. Sheldon is general superintendent of the Wisconsin Congregational Association. Clarence Shepard of Milwaukee, who is considered one of the best preachers in the state, will preside at the institution.

On Saturday evening Mr. Shepard, assisted by Mr. Nichols, will give a musical entertainment in the church, which should prove a treat to all music lovers.

A supper will be served in the church parlors on Tuesday evening following the dedication by the ladies of the church. This supper will be for the members of the church and their friends. The only charge will be to the musical entertainment on Saturday evening, when there will be an admission fee of one dollar.

The new edifice is rapidly nearing completion and it is beginning to present a handsome appearance. The main room or auditorium has been finished for some time past, with the exception of the installing of the large pipe organ, which is now in progress. The church is a fine building and must be seen to be appreciated.

Council Cuts Down Taxes.

That the commission plan of city government is working out all right to Edw. Chaire is indicated by the marked decrease in the tax rate. What decrease there will be in the rate is due entirely to the fact that the city's annual tax levy was reduced $3,000 from that of last year. And despite the decrease in the city levy to that amount provision is made for raising $30,000 of the bonded indebtedness of the city in addition to taking care of the interest on bonds, sinking funds, and money needed for general city purposes.

This is a shining over which the mayor and councilmen should feel proud and which should give the taxpayers great satisfaction, not only because of the lowering of the tax burdens but also over the fact that the commission plan of government in which they reposed such confidence as to vote it into being here is demonstrating that their confidence was not misplaced. Less than two years in power, the new city government has already made a material reduction in taxes.

Public improvement work has not been curtailed by the council to make a low tax levy possible but careful business management has been exercised with the most satisfactory results. A large amount of public improvement has been done during the year and it is likely that next year improvements on an even larger scale will be carried out. —Edw. Chaire.

The experience of Edw. Chaire is no different from that of other cities where the commission plan has been adopted. It seems to give pretty general satisfaction, and the general verdict is that more is accomplished with a smaller amount of money than was done under the old plan.

Ministers' Association Meets.

Last Monday morning the Ministers' Association of Grand Rapids met at the Congregational parsonage for the purpose of electing officers and transacting such other business as might come before it.

The election resulted in Rev. M. B. Milne being chosen president and Rev. O. A. Mellick secretary. The following provision was made for the union Thanksgiving service. The service will be held at the First Congregational church at 10:30 a. m., Nov. 30th. Rev. M. B. Milne will conduct the service and Rev. H. B. Johnson will preach the sermon. After making provision for definite programs at the regular meetings of the Association during the coming year the meeting adjourned.

Rev. M. B. Milne, Pres.
Rev. O. A. Mellick, Sec.

Gray is Released.

W. A. Gray, who has been in the county jail for some time past, was released on Friday.

Gray was arrested in August on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, he having sold some land in Texas to Eugene Miller, taking ten dollars in cash and a note for $100 from Mr. Miller in payment for the land.

Later the company that Gray claimed he was working for stated that he was not in their employ and had no land of theirs to sell. Gray was then arrested and held for trial in circuit court, but the company refused to prosecute the case, and Gray was released.

Attended Auto Show.

Several of our citizens went to Stevens Point on Thursday, Friday or Saturday to take in the auto show held there by the Auto Sales Company. They were very favorably impressed with the exhibition, there being different models of the Cadillac, Overland, Stoddard-Dayton, E. M. P., Flinders and Buick, making quite a showing.

The Auto Sales Company have put up a new building especially for the handling of automobiles, and have a nice place with an abundance of room.

Miss Alma Hansen, who has been employed in the Oberbeck office the past year, has accepted a position as stenographer in the First National Bank.

Plan May Not Carry.

It is possible that our citizens will have a chance to vote on the question of changing the plans of city government at the next election, going from the present cumbersome method to that of the commission plan, by means of which the city affairs would be administered by three men.

The general verdict among the common folk is that it will not carry in this city.

One of the present aldermen is credited with having made the statement that under the new plan he could never hope to get a job as an alderman, while at present he did hold the position of alderman.

This might be considered by some as an argument in favor of the commission plan.

Any American born citizen is eligible to the office of president of the United States, but notwithstanding this fact there are a large majority of us who will never hold the job. This is no reason for abolishing the present form of government and substituting one where there is a multiplicity of presidents so that we may all stand a better show of getting into office.

The commission form of government is not calculated to give jobs to the needy, but is rather to cut off some of the handouts on and gratifiers that in a great many places have in fact been city governments.

A New Photographic Studio.

The Kandy Studio is the name of a new concern that has opened business in this city during the past week. It is located in the Wheeler & Kruger building on the east side over Leavitt's store.

The place has been fitted up especially for the purpose, a skylight of ample proportions having been installed on the north side of the building. The front part is furnished for a reception room, with a large operating room immediately in the rear. The back of the building is occupied by two building rooms, making a very neat and handy place for the purpose intended. A camera and instruments for portraiture up to 11x14 has been installed, which it is expected will handle the immediate needs of the establishment.

Busy Izzy Coming.

Manager Daly has had quite a time in landing the busy Izzy show which plays at the open house on Friday evening. The busy Izzy company puts up a good show, but after they had signed up with Grand Rapids the management evidently heard that the people of this city were not turning out as well to shows as they might, and an effort was made to cancel the date here. As they had allowed too much time to elapse Mr. Daly held them to their contract and they will be here on Friday evening if something unforeseen does not occur.

The busy Izzy company is said to be a good one, in fact it comes as highly recommended as any of them and Manager Daly would like to see a good crowd out to greet them.

Big Hunting Party.

Messrs. L. M. Nash, W. E. Nash, L. E. Nash, O. M. Nash, W. J. Conway, W. H. Curry, M. Weeks, E. O. Rosser, H. S. Bates, A. F. Bates, C. E. Bates, C. F. Kellogg, John Harrigan, Ernest Rosser and J. A. Collins of Delavan leave this week for the vicinity of Boulder Lake where they will spend two weeks deer hunting. The party will go in camp for the first time in their new concrete hunting shanty which was erected this fall, and which is one of the finest and best equipped outfits in northern Wisconsin.

Will Open Fine Restaurant.

Messrs. Kroll & Kelly have rented the place now occupied by August Bankert as a tailor shop on Third Avenue, and intend to open up a first class restaurant about the middle of this month. They expect to give the citizens something up to date, and better than we have ever had here before. Mr. Bankert will move his tailor shop over the Miller harness shop.

Attention.

To Members of SS Peter and Paul Church No. 404, C. O. P.
Bro. Smith and Truett under the direction of Bro. Dr. F. X. Pommeroy and under the auspices of the Court are going to serve an oyster supper and lunch on Tuesday evening, Nov. 21. You and ladies are cordially invited. A social hop will be had after supper.

Will Have New Quarters.

I. Zimmerman, the west side shoe man, has rented the place formerly occupied by Joe Whier for his shoe store, and will move into the place in a few weeks. It will be entirely fixed over for Mr. Zimmerman, and will make him one of the finest stores in the city.

Friday was tag day in this city and the ladies were busy on that day. They started in early in the morning and before night had rounded up the sum of $250. The money will be used by the ladies in their relief work, which they carry on during the winter months.

Wallace Halderston, who has spent the past summer in South Dakota, where he was working at his trade as a mason, returned home last week. He reports that business was very slow out in that section owing to the drought and poor crops, and he does not expect to return there next season.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Snyder of the town of Grand Rapids have the sympathy of the community in the death of their three year old son Raymond, who died on Thursday afternoon. The funeral was held on Saturday from the Catholic church with interment in Calvary cemetery.

May Build a Gas Plant.

The directors of the Electric & Water Company have been considering the proposition of putting in a gas plant here for the purpose of furnishing gas for cooking and lighting purposes, and in order to discover how much of a demand there may be for such a plant they are sending out a number of postal cards to the people of this city to find how many of them care enough about the matter to put in gas in case such a plant is established.

In many cities where there are gas plants in operation a great deal of the cooking is done in summer time with gas, it being a cheap and handy way to do cooking with a minimum of heat and dirt. Of course it is also used quite extensively for lighting, altho it is not expected that this part of it would cost much more here on account of the low cost of electricity.

—Music, laughter and slightly surroundings are what the present day theatre-goers want, and it is promised that these ingredients have been fully supplied in the new musical comedy "Busy Body" in which George Sidney will make his appearance at Daly's Theatre next Friday, Nov. 10th. A big company of forty people headed by Miss Carrie Webber have been employed to aid Mr. Sidney in his fun making and the chorus is said to be one of more than average ability.

Among the guests present from out of town were Mrs. W. C. Knoelke of Escobedo, Miss Jessie Johnson of Columbus and Myron Natwick of Chicago.

CITY FATHERS HOLD A SESSION

The regular meeting of the city council was held last night with Mayor Wheelan presiding.

A petition signed by some eighty of the city's tax payers was presented to the council asking for an appropriation of $1000 for the assistance of Riverview Hospital. It seems that the deficit during the past year amounted to about $800, and the physicians of this city who had charge of the institution had voted to close it. There were some, however, who thought that it was worth the amount to the city to be kept in operation, hence the petition. The matter was laid over until the next meeting of the council.

E. P. Arpin was appointed supervisor in the Second ward in place of Wm. H. Reeves, removed from the city.

Dr. Pomminville was appointed health officer and inspector of schools to fill vacancy caused by the removal of Dr. Bluelich.

A resolution was passed which embodied the preliminary steps in the widening of Oak Street.

A committee was appointed to make a report at the next meeting of the council for the purpose of discovering the places along the river bank where it would be necessary to make improvements to avoid washouts and similar trouble in case of high water like was experienced here last month.

There was some discussion on the matter of the paving material to be used on our streets, and as opinions seemed to differ it was decided to call a meeting of the board of public works in the near future at which time the tax payers of the city would be invited to be present and air their views on the subject.

An ordinance concerning public amusement places was passed which will appear in legal form later.

Jackson-Natwick.

Miss Luella Jackson and Franklin J. Natwick were married on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, Rev. Fred Staff of the Congregational church performing the ceremony. They were accompanied by Miss Ruby Natwick, sister of the groom, and Clarence Jackson, brother of the bride. The wedding march was played by Miss Julia Jackson, cousin of the bride. Only the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home. Mr. and Mrs. Natwick left the same evening for the south on a wedding tour, intending to visit at Chicago, Milwaukee and points in the southern part of the state, and upon their return will make their home on the west side in this city, where they have a new house ready for occupancy.

The contracting parties to this marriage are two of our nice young people, the bride being the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, a teacher by profession and a most estimable young lady. The groom is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Natwick, who has lived in this city all his life, a graduate of our high school and the University of Wisconsin, at which latter place he received his diploma as electrical engineer, a profession which he has since been following, and in which he has made good.

Among the guests present from out of town were Mrs. W. C. Knoelke of Escobedo, Miss Jessie Johnson of Columbus and Myron Natwick of Chicago.

The establishment of a Y. M. C. A. building would not be for the use of the school children alone. There are many young men in the city who have passed the school age, or may be compelled to work for a living before they have passed that age, who would be pleased to have such a place in which to spend their spare evenings.

While we do not agree entirely with our correspondent, we publish his communication just as cheerfully as if we did. No doubt there are many sides to the matter besides the one we see, and we will be pleased at any time to publish communications upon the matter.

To Use Trackless Trolley.
Up at Merrill the members of the street railway company are looking into the matter of extending their system by the use of the trackless trolley. This is a street car that travels over an ordinary road driven by means of an electric motor, which obtains its power from a trolley wire overhead.

The wheels of the trucks are equipped with solid rubber tires and are able to turn out for teams or obstructions along the street. They are said to have proven quite successful in some places.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Anderson of Chicago were in the city Monday and Tuesday, Mr. Anderson having come here to meet the stockholders of the Johnson & Hill Company, who had extended to him a proposition of taking charge of one of the departments in their new store. Satisfactory arrangements were made and Mr. Anderson will return here within a short time to take charge of the new position.

Several of our citizens went to Stevens Point on Thursday, Friday or Saturday to take in the auto show held there by the Auto Sales Company. They were very favorably impressed with the exhibition, there being different models of the Cadillac, Overland, Stoddard-Dayton, E. M. F. Flanders and Buick, making quite a show.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Snyder of the town of Grand Rapids have the sympathy of the community in the death of their three year old son Raymond, who died on Thursday afternoon. The funeral was held on Saturday from the Catholic church with interment in Calvary cemetery.

Manager Daly has had quite a time in handling the Busy Izzy show which plays at the opera house on Friday evening. The Busy Izzy company puts up a good show, but after they had signed up with Grand Rapids the management evidently heard that the people of this city were not turning out as well to shows as they might, and an effort was made to cancel the date here. As they had allowed too much time to elapse Mr. Daly held them to their contract and they will be here on Friday evening if something unforeseen does not occur.

The Busy Izzy company is said to be a good one, in fact it comes as highly recommended as any of them and Manager Daly would like to see a good crowd out to greet them.

May Build a Gas Plant.

The directors of the Electric & Water Company have been considering the proposition of putting in a gas plant here for the purpose of furnishing gas for cooking and lighting purposes, and in order to discover how much of a demand there may be for such a plant they are sending out a number of postal cards to the people of this city to find how many of them care enough about the matter to put in gas in case such a plant is established.

In many cities where there are gas plants in operation a great deal of the cooking is done in summer time with gas, it being a cheap and handy way to do cooking with a minimum of heat and dirt. Of course it is also used quite extensively for lighting, also it is not expected that this part of it would cut much figure here on account of the low cost of electricity.

CITY FATHERS

HOLD A SESSION

The regular meeting of the city council was held last night with Mayor Wheeler presiding. A petition signed by some eighty of the city's taxpayers was presented to the council asking for an appropriation of $1000 for the assistance of Riverview Hospital. It seems that the deficit during the past year amounted to about $300, and the physicians of this city who had charge of the institution had voted to close it. There were some, however, who thought that it was worth this amount to the city to be kept in operation, hence the petition. The matter was laid over until the next meeting of the council.

E. P. Arpin was appointed supervisor in the Second ward in place of Wm. H. Reeves, removed from the city.

Dr. Pomainville was appointed head officer and inspector of schools to fill vacancy caused by the removal of Dr. Blanchard.

A resolution was passed which embodied the preliminary steps in the widening of Oak Street.

A committee was appointed to make a report at the next meeting of the council for the purpose of discovering the places along the river bank where it would be necessary to make improvements to avoid washouts and similar trouble in case of high water like was experienced here last month.

There was some discussion on the matter of the paving material to be used on our streets, and as opinions seemed to differ it was decided to call a meeting of the board of public works in the near future at which time the tax payers of the city would be invited to be present and air their views on the subject.

An ordinance concerning public amusement places was passed which will appear in legal form later.

Jackson-Natwick.

Miss Luella Jackson and Franklin J. Natwick were married on Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, Rev. Fred Staff of the Congregational church performing the ceremony. They were accompanied by Miss Ruby Natwick, sister of the groom, and Clarence Jackson, brother of the bride. The wedding march was played by Miss Julia Jackson, cousin of the bride. Only the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home. Mr. and Mrs. Natwick left the same evening for the south on a wedding tour, intending to visit at Chicago, Milwaukee and points in the southern part of the state, and upon their return will make their home on the west side in this city, where they have a new house ready for occupancy.

The contracting parties to this marriage are two of our nice young people, the bride being the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, a teacher by profession and a most estimable young lady. The groom is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Natwick, who has lived in this city all his life, a graduate of our high school and the University of Wisconsin, at which latter place he received his diploma as electrical engineer, a profession which he has since been following, and in which he has made good.

Among the guests present from out of town were Mrs. W. C. Kneelock of Roscolet, Miss Jessie Johnson of Columbus and Myron Natwick of Chicago.

About the Boy.

Dear Editor and Citizens of Grand Rapids:—

I was particularly interested in the editorial, which appeared in last week's paper on "A Plea for the Boys," for it is about time that someone was making a plea for the boys of Grand Rapids. The average citizen sets up an awful howl because the boys hang out on Daly's corner or the Pool "Shack," but very few are interested in doing anything to remedy the situation.

As I understand the subject, it is not a question as to whether or not the average American boy of high school age should be permitted to get together in the evenings, if he so desires. The subject involves the question of furnishing the boys a better place to meet.

Your suggestion that a Y. M. C. A. be built is excellent in theory, but how many boys of high school age could scrape up the necessary five or ten dollars for membership privileges each year? The problem becomes much simpler than even raising $100,000 for a Y. M. C. A., when one considers the fact that the people of Grand Rapids have placed several thousand dollars into a high school which has an excellent gymnasium in connection. This building and especially the gymnasium is closed nearly every evening in the year.

Would it be unreasonable and absurd to ask in behalf of the boys of Grand Rapids that this building be opened in the evening and placed at the disposal of the boys?

The work would have to be under supervision and some expense may be incurred in keeping up such a proposition, but I take it for granted that any fair minded citizen will not begrudge the boys a few dollars spent in this way.

A Grand Rapids Boy.

The above is written by a Grand Rapids boy who has passed thru the different phases of home life here in this city and should know what he is talking about to a certain extent. He realizes the necessity of such an institution but gets cold feet in the same breath and says that it is an impossibility without even giving it a second thought.

He thinks the boys could not scrape up the necessary ten a year. Maybe some of them couldn't, but those that hang around the corner smoking cigarettes, or those that put in their spare time playing pool ought to be able to save enough, if they felt so inclined, to pay their yearly dues. It must be remembered that such institutions are not supported entirely by school children.

Many men in a city this size take a great deal of interest in such things and often keep up several memberships, asking for nothing in return. Then, in our most sanguine moments we never had in our mind a vision of a hundred thousand dollar building.

His suggestion that the gymnasium of the high school be thrown open for the use of the boys is all right, and it might be used to a certain extent by the high school children, but very much doubt if anybody else would visit it. Then it is possible that many of the high school boys would not care to go back to the school in the evening, after spending the whole day there. We would not blame them if they did not. A high school boy is not a great deal different from his older brother. He is looking for a variety, a change from the regular surroundings that he encounters every day. When he attends school during the day he likes to spend his evenings somewhere else, and nobody can blame him. Then the high school building is so far from the center of town that very few would go up there during the cold season.

The establishment of a Y. M. C. A. building would not be for the use of the school children alone. There are many young men in the city who have passed the school age, or may be compelled to work for a living before they have passed that age, who would be pleased to have such a place in which to spend their spare evenings.

While we do not agree entirely with our correspondent, we publish his communication just as cheerfully as if we did. No doubt there are many sides to the matter besides the one we see, and we will be pleased at any time to publish communications upon the matter.

To Use Trackless Trolley.
Up at Merrill the members of the street railway company are looking into the matter of extending their system by the use of the trackless trolley. This is a street car that travels over an ordinary road driven by means of an electric motor, which obtains its power from a trolley wire overhead.

The wheels of the trucks are equipped with solid rubber tires and are able to turn out for turns or obstructions along the street. They are said to have proven quite successful in some places.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Anderson of Chicago were in the city Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Anderson having come here to meet the stockholders of the Johnson & Hill Company, who had extended to him a proposition of taking charge of one of the departments in their new store. Satisfactory arrangements were made and Mr. Anderson will return here within a short time to take charge of the new position.

WILL DEDICATE THEIR NEW CHURCH.

Sunday, November 26th has been designated as the day for dedicating the new Congregational church, and services appropriate to the occasion will be held on that day.

J. D. Nichols of Detroit, a tuncologist of more than ordinary ability, will assist the choir in their work, and Rev. O. S. Davis, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, will preach Sunday morning. In the evening Rev. Frank Sheldon of Madison will preach. Mr. Sheldon is general superintendent of the Wisconsin Congregational Association. Clarence Shepard of Milwaukee, who is considered one of the best pipe organists in the state, will preside at the instrument.

On Saturday evening Mr. Shepard, assisted by Mr. Nichols, will give a musical entertainment in the church, which should prove a treat to all music lovers.

A supper will be served in the church parlors on Tuesday evening following the dedication by the ladies of the church. This supper will be for the members of the church and their friends. The only charge will be to the musical entertainment on Saturday evening, when there will be an admission fee of one dollar.

The new edifice is rapidly nearing completion and it is beginning to present a handsome appearance. The main room or auditorium has been finished for some time past, with the exception of the installing of the large pipe organ, which is now in progress. The church is a fine building and must be seen to be appreciated.

Council Cuts Down Taxes.

That the commission plan of city government is working out all right in Eau Claire is indicated by the marked decrease in the tax rate. What decrease there will be in the rate is due entirely to the fact that the city's annual tax levy was reduced $30,000 from that of last year. And despite the decrease in the city levy to that amount provision is made for retiring $30,000 of the bonded indebtedness of the city in addition to taking care of the interest on bonds, sinking funds, and money needed for general city purposes.

This is a showing over which the mayor and councilmen should feel proud and which should give the taxpayers great satisfaction, not only because of the lowering of the tax burden but also over the fact that the commission plan of government in which they reposed such confidence as to vote it into force here is demonstrating that their confidence was not misplaced. For less than two years in power, the new city government has already made a material reduction in taxes.

Public improvement work has not been curtailed by the council to make a low tax levy possible but careful business management has been exercised with the most satisfactory results. A large amount of public improvement has been done during the year and it is likely that next year improvements on an even larger scale will be carried out.—Eau Claire Leader.

The experience of Eau Claire is no different from that of other cities where the commission plan has been adopted. It seems to give pretty general satisfaction, and the general verdict is that more is accomplished with a smaller amount of money than was done under the old plan.

Ministers' Association Meets.
Last Monday morning the Ministers' Association of Grand Rapids met at the Congregational parsonage for the purpose of electing officers and transacting such other business as might come before it.

The election resulted in Rev. M. B. Milne being chosen president and Rev. O. A. Melicke secretary. The following provision was made for the union Thanksgiving service. The service will be held at the First Congregational church at 10:30 a. m., Nov. 30th. Rev. M. B. Milne will conduct the service and Rev. H. B. Johnson will preach the sermon. After making provision for definite programs at the regular meetings of the Association during the ensuing year the meeting adjourned.

Gray is Released.
W. A. Gray, who has been in the county jail for some time past, was released on Friday.

Gray was arrested in August on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, he having sold some land in Texas to Eugene Miller, taking ten dollars in cash and a note for $100 from Mr. Miller in payment for the land.

Later the company that Gray claimed he was working for stated that he was not in their employ and had no land of theirs to sell. Gray was then arrested and held for trial in circuit court, but the company refused to prosecute the case, and Gray was released.

Attended Auto Show.

Several of our citizens went to Stevens Point on Thursday, Friday or Saturday to take in the auto show held there by the Auto Sales Company. They were very favorably impressed with the exhibition, there being different models of the Cadillac, Overland, Stoddard-Dayton, E. M. F., Flanders and Buick, making quite a showing.

The Auto Sales Company have put up a new building especially for the handling of automobiles, and have a nice place with an abundance of room.

Miss Alma Hansen, who has been employed in the Oberbeck office the past year, has accepted a position as stenographer in the First National Bank.

Plan May Not Carry.

It is possible that our citizens will have a chance to vote on the question of changing the plans of city government at the next election, going from the present commission method to that of the commission plan, by means of which the city affairs would be administered by three men.

The general verdict among the common folk is that it will not carry in this city.

One of the present aldermen is credited with having made the statement that under the new plan he could never hope to get a job as commissioner, while at present he did hold the position of alderman.

This might be considered by some as an argument in favor of the commission plan.

Any American born citizen is eligible to the office of president of the United States, but notwithstanding this fact there are a large majority of us who will never hold the job. This is no reason for abolishing the present form of government and substituting one where there is a multiplicity of presidents so that we may all stand a better show of getting into office.

The commission form of government is not calculated to give jobs to the needy, but is rather to cut off some of the hangers-on and grafters that in a great many places have infested city governments.

A New Photographic Studio.

The Kandy Studio is the name of a new concern that has opened business in this city during the past week, it being located in the Wheeler & Kruger building on the east side over Levin's store.

The place has been fitted up especially for the purpose, a skylight of ample proportions having been installed on the north side of the building. The front part is furnished for a reception room, with a large operating room immediately in the rear. The back of the building is occupied by two building rooms, making a very neat and handy place for the purpose intended. A camera and instruments for portraiture up to 11x14 has been installed which is expected will handle the immediate needs of the establishment.

Busy Izzy Coming.

Manager Daly has had quite a time in landing the Izzy Izzy show which plays at the opera house on Friday evening. The Izzy Izzy company puts up a good show, but after they had signed up with Grand Rapids the management evidently heard that the people of this city were not turning out as well to shows as they might, and an effort was made to cancel the date here. As they had allowed too much time to elapse Mr. Daly held them to their contract and they will be here on Friday evening if something unforeseen does not occur.

The Izzy Izzy company is said to be a good one, in fact it comes as highly recommended as any of them and Manager Daly would like to see a good crowd out to greet them.

The party will go in camp for the first time in their new concrete hunting shanty which was erected this fall, and which is one of the finest and best equipped outfits in northern Wisconsin.

Will Open Fine Restaurant.

Messrs. Kroll & Kelly have rented the place now occupied by August Bankert as a tailor shop on Third Avenue, and intend to open up a first class restaurant about the middle of this month. They expect to give the citizens something up to date, and better than we have ever had here before. Mr. Bankert will move his tailor shop over the Niles harness shop.

THE CARELESS SMOKER.

The average smoker in too careless in the manner in which he tosses burning cigar and cigarette butts and light matches about. The chances are that no damage will be caused, and he takes those chances. When a home, a business house, a city block, or even a large starting from a smoker's carelessness the smoker goes scot free. It is not pertinent to ask why the law should punish a man for spitting on the sidewalk because some one might contract a germ disease as a result of his carelessness, while no punishment is fixed to deter him from throwing fire about, although millions of dollars' worth of property and many lives may be lost if the butt or match chances to fall where it can start a fire. The crude and the anti-smoke contingent in making much headway as a moral issue, a movement for the improvement of public health or an agitation against the boorish individual who in discourteous to those with whom he comes in contact, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. It should result in the enactment of city ordinances making it a misdemeanor to throw lighted matches and butts about, and in state laws providing punishment where it is possible to fix the blame for a fire upon a negligent smoker, millions of dollars' worth of property and many lives might be saved. The habit of smoking cannot be ended by agitation.

When does slang cease to be slang? This is not a commonplace, but the inquiry of a correspondent who seeks to know what length of life a word must have, how long must it be used and generally understood, before it passes from being, as it were, an undesirable alien in the realm of our words and becomes naturalized. Every schoolboy knows that "the herring pond" means the sea. Most people would probably term it an Americanism referring to the Atlantic ocean. The only dictionary handy duly admits the hyphenated word, describes it as slang, and illustrates it with "to be sent across the herring-pond; to be transported," says the London Chronicle. The word was used as long ago as 1762, when an English ambassador wrote from Calais to a secretary of state that he had "traversed the herring-pond after about ten hours' sail."

The burglar will always be about seeking for a chance to rob, and the police problem is how to reduce the ranks of these thieves to a minimum and make their work so dangerous that few will dare to undertake it. Carelessness and forgetfulness on the part of the housekeeper make the work of these gentry far easier than it would otherwise be. The police generally do the best they can, but they could do far better were it not for the burglars offered so many golden opportunities for the work they are always so ready to do.

A one-pounder mounted on a gun carriage is said now to solve the problem of firing at aeroplanes. How such a weapon could be effectively sighted remains to be shown. The conviction grows that efforts to prepare for the aerial battleship should be along the line of perfecting the sight, enlarging the caliber and lengthening the range of sharpshooter rifles, and training men for their speediest and most accurate use.

The seizure of Dr. Richter, a noted German engineer, by Greek bandits who held him for a ransom of $225,000 will be apt to cause travelers to avoid Mount Olympus until assurance is received that the government of Greece is strong enough to prevent such proceedings by the Greek National society, so-called, for the replenishment of the society's treasury.

A Boston Chinaman is going back to his native land after having amassed a fortune of half a million dollars out of chop suey. We venture to predict that he will lose his head if he ever tries to spring that American invention on his fellow countrymen.

When we read how the aviators are held up by rain and fog and other weather conditions it becomes more and more evident that an immense development must come in the flying machine before it arrives at the stage of much usefulness.

In certain parts of the country farmers have been cutting hay with their automobiles. Unfortunately it will not be possible for many of them to dig potatoes with automobiles this year.

One difference between joy riders and night riders is that joy riders sometimes manage to kill themselves. But they are both dangerous to the innocent bystanders.

The Pullman building in New York is said to be the narrowest skyscraper in existence. A glance at its picture lends one to suspect that it is a smokestack equipped with windows.

PEKING IS UNEASY

MORE EDICTS BY CHINESE EMPEROR MEAN END OF MANCHU RULE.

PENSIONS TO BE STOPPED

General Situation Is Most Serious—Both Warring Factions Fear Massacre—Foreigners Leave Capital and Legations Strengthened Guards.

Peking, China.—The state of terror which has taken possession of the entire empire was further shown by a long list of edicts supplementing the remarkable proclamation and offering further concessions of the most radical character. The edicts indicate that even though the dynasty survives, Manchuria will be at an end. The transfer of cabinet offices to native Chinese is ordered.

The national assembly has voted its approval of the throne's action. The revolutionists say "it is too late." A state of panic prevails in Peking, Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton, as well as nearly every small place in the empire, over the fear of massacre. The Chinese and Manchurians regarding each other with mutual distrust and fear.

The transfer of all cabinet offices to native Chinese is one of the principal points in the edicts, and the throne gives the promise that hereafter "Manchurians and Chinese shall be regarded equally." This means that the system of pensions by which practically every Manchurian has been enabled to live in idleness is to be ended. The Manchurians will have to get out and earn their living like any other Chinese. The edicts were a complete repudiation to the demands of the national assembly.

The general situation in Peking is more tense than at any time since the revolution began. The Manchurians fear the invasion of the capital by the rebels, while the Chinese are in dread of a possible massacre by the Manchurians. The foreign legations are surrounded by a force of Chinese soldiers for protection, the streets are filled with armed soldiers, and the atmosphere is one of the most tense in the history of the city.

The Manchurians, who for the first time in generations, are cut off from their pensions, talk of massacre for revenge. There are 600,000 Chinese and 100,000 Manchurians in the city of Peking. It is asserted among the native Chinese that Prince Tsai Tzu, an uncle of the infant emperor, P'u Yi, is waiting to lead the Manchurians in their massacre.

Many are entertained for foreigners in the province of Shanai, many of whom are Americans. A dispatch from Canton says that city is in a turmoil of fear and excitement over the report that the Manchurians will force a massacre of the Chinese in retaliation for the numerous edicts from the throne.

ROADS HIT BY COURT

SUPREME BODY'S DECISION VICTORY FOR COMMISSION.

Rules That All Carriers Must Comply With the Federal Safety Appliance Act.

Washington.—The United States Supreme court, in an opinion by Justice Van Devanter, gave broad powers to the Interstate commerce commission in a sweeping interpretation of the federal safety appliance law. It virtually eliminates state railroad commissions from control of roads within the state. The court held that the law is violated when a car, not properly equipped under the act, is used on a railway doing an interstate business, to carry shipments from one point in a state to another point within the same state. This takes cases of this character out of the jurisdiction of state railway commissions and forecloses the complete control of the railroads of the country by the Interstate commerce commission.

The opinion of the court was given in a case brought by the government against the Southern Railway company in which it was alleged that the government is to sue the railroad for carrying shipments which originated in the state of Alabama and which were destined to points within the state.

RED HATS FOR 17

POPE TO NAME THREE AMERICANS AS CARDINALS ON NOVEMBER 27.

TWENTY-TWO SEATS VACANT

Archbishops Farley of New York, O'Connell of Boston and Falconio of Washington Are Among Those to Be Elected.

Rome.—On November 27 when the consistory is held in the Vatican Pope Pius will create seventeen new cardinals, and in this number will be Most Rev. John M. Farley, archbishop of New York; Most Rev. W. H. O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, and Most Rev. Diomedo Falconio, apostolic delegate in the United States at Washington.

This last consistory was held in December, 1907, four cardinals being appointed at that time. Since then many vacancies have occurred in the sacred college by death, and now there are twenty-two seats of the seventy unfilled.

Since 1907 the intention to hold a consistory has been announced from time to time, and on each occasion the consistory has been postponed for various causes.

The question of the appointment of another American cardinal has been under discussion a number of times. Archbishop Farley, Archbishop O'Connell and Archbishop Quigley of Chicago have been mentioned. But on one occasion it was said that the United States should not have more than one cardinal during the life of Cardinal Gibbons.

The proposed consistory in November will be the fifth held by Pope Pius X. On the death of Pope Leo XIII, there were sixty-four cardinals. During the last eight years Pius X. has created seventeen new cardinals, of whom two have died.

James' four-year-old daughter clung to him with her arms about his neck as he ran outdoors, refusing to let go until he struck her a vicious blow in the face, and then shot himself. Mrs. James, who was wounded in the hip, will probably recover.

TOBACCO PLAN HIT

INDEPENDENTS SAY IT WILL NOT RESTORE COMPETITION.

New York.—The plan for reorganization of the tobacco trust submitted by the American Tobacco company and co-defendants to the government anti-trust suit was both praised and condemned before the circuit court judges of the United States for the southern district of New York.

After Attorney General Wickham had filed the government's answer to the plan, Lewis Cass Lodge, arguing for the defendants, insisted that it was a plan to comply with the Supreme court's mandate for a reorganization that will restore competition in compliance with the terms of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Representatives of the preferred stockholders and bondholders of the American Tobacco and constituent companies urged approval of the division of the trust into four segregated companies, to be operated independent of each other.

Independent manufacturers, dealers, and producers of tobacco unanimously disapproved the plan on the ground that it is a sham proposal to divide the properties, control of which still would be retained by the group of individuals now dominating the industry. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston made the principal argument against the proposal.

The answer of the attorney general did not express general opposition to the dissolution plan, but contained for the guidance of the court many restrictions deemed necessary to assure restoration of competition in the tobacco industry.

Maintaining that it was impossible for the court to determine in advance whether a plan actually will accomplish effective competition, the attorney general requested that right be reserved to the government to apply to the court at any time within five years for other relief upon a showing that the plan did not result in a new condition in harmony with the law.

CONVENTION OF STATE LUTHERANS

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING

OPENS IN MILWAUKEE.

REV. ROTH DELIVERS ADDRESS

MORE THAN SIXTY DELEGATES FROM ALL PARTS OF WISCONSIN ATTEND SESSIONS OF THE LUTHER LEAGUE.

Madison.—The fourteenth annual convention of the Luther league of Wisconsin opened at Milwaukee in the Church of the Reformation, Rev. A. J. Holl, pastor. More than sixty delegates from all portions of the state were in attendance and the gathering was one representative of the younger element of the Lutheran church in the state, regardless of synodical connections or languages.

Rev. Paul L. Roth, chaplain of the Milwaukee hospital and the Layton home, delivered the convention address in the vesper services which marked the opening session. An informal reception followed. Rev. Holl welcomed the visitors and the response was by Rev. G. Koller, pastor of the Church of the Epiphany and president of the Wisconsin Luther league.

The work of the convention began with the reports of officers and committees and the following papers: "Great Events in Luther's Life," Mrs. Conrad Hoffman, Madison; "Luther and Education," Miss Hannah Hegge, Stoughton; "What We Have Gained from the Reformation," Miss Amanda Rapp, Racine; and "How Can a Luther Rapper, Racine, and the Reformation," Prof. Carl Jorgensen, west division high school, representing the Church of the Redeemer, Milwaukee. "The Junior Luther League," Miss Edith Reller, Reformation, Milwaukee; "Methods and Plans for Conducting a Junior League," Miss Isobel Riedl, Epiphany, Milwaukee, followed by a discussion.

The fifteenth annual state conference of the Wisconsin Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution opened at Park Avenue Methodist church, Kenosha, with 150 delegates representing 26 chapters in attendance. The opening session was called to order by Mrs. Helen Van Ostrand of Antigo, state reporter.

At the opening session the program opened with an organ selection played by Mrs. P. M. Cleveland of Kenosha, which was followed by the singing of "America" by the entire audience, led by Mrs. Fred Perkins of Kenosha. After an invocation by Mrs. B. P. Dorr, chaplain of the Antigo chapter, a greeting was given by Mrs. Cora Sutherland Schilde, regent of the Kenosha chapter. Following the response by Mrs. A. A. Jackson, regent of the Janesville chapter, the reports of the regent, Mrs. Van Ostrand; the secretary, Miss Carrie J. Smith of Port Atkinson, and the treasurer, William E. Cole of Fond du Lac, were read.

The opening session closed with a musical and literary program.

Draw Named as State Aid in Case

Gov. McGovern appointed Walter Drew, Madison special counsel for the state in an appeal to the circuit court by the Northern Pacific railroad to test the validity of an order by the state railroad commission. The order of the commission relates to better passenger service for the people of Grantsburg and the railway company appeals on the ground that the order interferes with interstate commerce and is unreasonable.

The old arrangement it required three days for residents of Grantsburg to go to St. Paul or Minneapolis and return. The commission took evidence in the case and finally ordered the Northern Pacific to rebuild its station at Grantsburg and to improve its service by putting on a daily passenger train each way, excepting Sunday, from Grantsburg to the Minnesota state line.

State Positions Are Filled

Among the appointments announced by the Wisconsin State Civil Service Commission are: Dairy and food inspector, Stewart B. Cook; land and John E. Boettcher, Janesville; William Winder, Stockbridge; Henry L. Bornheimer, Port Atkinson; and George Warner, Marathon. B. O. Beecher, Madison, second assistant, state insurance department; Stanley Allen, Madison, assistant, state tax commission; Dr. Alexander Berger, Jefferson, physician, state tuberculosis sanatorium, Wales; Joseph B. Harlow, Milwaukee, school for the blind, Janesville; O. C. Brandt, Milwaukee, statistical clerk, department of state.

Agricultural Fellowship

A fellowship in agricultural economics has just been provided by Prof. H. C. Taylor, head of the department of agricultural economics in the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. The fellowship amounts to $400 and has been awarded to C. E. Baker, who is doing special research work in the department on the history of agricultural production. This is continuation of work which has been in progress about five years.

Equity Society Opens Meet.

The Wisconsin branch of the American Society of Equity opened its annual meeting in Fond du Lac. Agriculturists interested in many varied lines gathered at the meeting and discussed matters relating to their interests. The women's auxiliary opened its meeting in connection with the conference. The program was drawn up by Secretary M. W. Tubbs of Madison.

New Wisconsin Incorporations

Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the secretary of state at Madison as follows: The Cream City Printers Inc., Milwaukee; capital, $10,000; incorporators, E. B. Barry, Max I. Katz and Louis A. Thanner. The Sellers Hotel company, Stevens Point; capital, $50,000; incorporators, E. N. Sellers, R. R. Sellers and F. R. Sellers. The American Pig Iron company, a New York corporation, with $50,000 capital and $1,000 invested in Wisconsin, filed a statement to do business in Wisconsin. The Waverly Manufacturing company, Milwaukee; an amendment increasing its capital from $5,000 to $50,000. The Lavigne Gear company, Milwaukee; capital, $100,000; incorporators, Charles E. Albright, George Uhlhorn and Norman L. Baker.

Will Be No Change in Building Plans

The capitol building commission will not change the plans of the new state house so as to provide for a larger assembly chamber. The present chamber in the west wing of the new capitol will continue to be used by the lower house of the legislature and a smaller chamber for the senate will be prepared in the south wing, which is now under construction.

The plans have been partly changed so as to provide for larger rooms for legislative committees than those first adopted.

The senate at the last session of the legislature reduced the number of its standing committees from seventeen to five, but increased the membership of each committee, thus requiring larger committee rooms but fewer of them. To meet this change the plans for committee rooms for the senate were altered by the capitol commission. Two of the four wings of the new capitol have been finished, another is about to be roofed and the steel work for the central or dome part has been finished.

State Remits $940,235 to Taxpayers.

The state of Wisconsin, through the initiative of Governor McGovern, will remit to the taxpayers of the state $940,235 in the form of an amended tax levy.

Governor McGovern called a conference of state officers at which the liabilities of the state were carefully gone over. The governor pointed out that nearly $1,000,000 could be remitted to the taxpayers, and the state would still have a big surplus in the general fund.

Secretary of State Frohr will issue notice of the amended tax levy to the county clerks of the state, a copy of which will be before the several county boards when they meet on November 14, to make their tax levy. The remittance of $940,235 means that instead of an increased tax levy of $906,000 for 1914, there will be a net reduction of $34,375, and there will not be a surplus of $1,558,903.28 in the general fund of the state as against a surplus of $1,267,399.95 at the same date in 1910 and $947,479.77 in 1909.

The action permitting this remittance of nearly $1,000,000 was taken by Governor McGovern under section 1069 of the statutes which authorized the governor, the secretary of state and state treasurer, or a majority thereof, when the public interests require it, to "apply the surplus in the treasury or so much thereof as may be by them deemed proper as a portion of the state tax levy in each year and the balance thereof after deducting the amount above provided for shall be apportioned in the same manner as now provided for under the provisions

ADVENTURES of the WORLD'S GREAT DETECTIVES

By George Barton

The Story of the Wax Impression

An Episode in the career of Thomas F. Byrnes the Great Inspector of Police

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY W. C. CHAPMAN.

On the night of the fifteenth of April, 1905, the first National Bank of Middleburg, N. Y., was entered and robbed of a large sum of money. It was the climax to a series of audacious bank burglaries committed under circumstances that led the authorities to believe that all of them were the work of an especially successful gang of bank thieves.

Thomas F. Byrnes, the greatest chief inspector of police that New York has ever known was in authority at that time and all of the facts in the case were laid before him. In the meantime complaints were coming in from other quarters. Robberies had been successfully pulled off at the Phoenix bank of Phoenix, N. Y.; the National Bank of Pawling, Pawling, N. Y.; the St. Hyacinth bank of West Farmham, Ontario, and the Thompson National bank of Thompson, Conn.

Superintendent Byrnes probably knew the methods of bank burglars better than any man in the United States, with the possible exception of William A. Pinkerton, and he began a study of the evidence in hand with the hope of determining the identity of the man who was directly concerned in this series of bold burglaries. Most bank crooks depend upon the use of dynamite and nitroglycerine to break open safes and vaults. The master hand in the cases under investigation used tools refined means of accomplishing his purpose. The robberies had evidently been engineered, if not accomplished, personally by burglars who actually learned his trade. He had secured an apprentice ship with the safe company and took the knowledge thus acquired and ungrudgingly used it against his benefactors.

One of the curious side lights in this connection was the failure of the safe company. Shimburn's success in breaking into their safes drove the concern out of business. He knew the banks and financial institutions that had purchased safes from his old company, and in committing the burglaries he always grimly gave these his preference. When it became known that the one-time expert of the safe company and the audacious safe breaker were one and the same person, the company found it practically impossible to dispose of any more of their products.

One of Shimburn's most brilliant achievements—his disreputable business can be mentioned in this manner—was his robbery of the vaults of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal company at White Haven, Pa., in 1897. He broke into the office at night and with a twist of the wrist managed to open the safe. There was, however, less than six thousand dollars in money there at the time. Shimburn expected to make a big haul and he was so thoroughly disgusted that he only took a few hundred dollars and left the balance of money in the safe. The effect of this may be imagined. The officers of the coal company promptly suspected that some of their clerks had been stealing, and it is said that one of the men was finally dismissed.

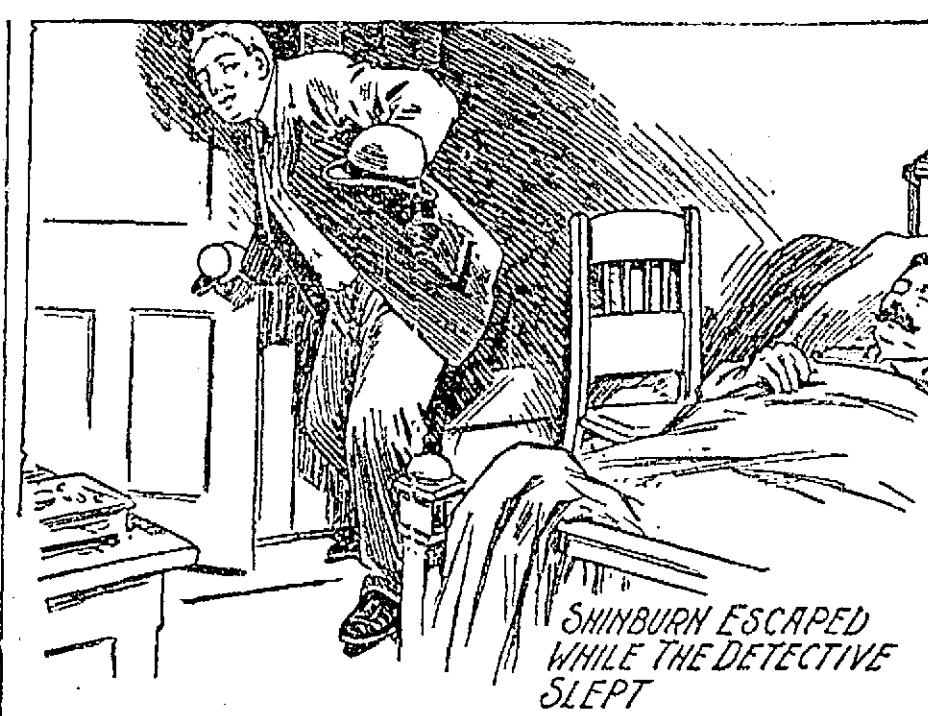

Shimburn was almost childlike in his demeanor toward his captors. He had a charming personality and talked engagingly. In other words, he possessed that quality which, for want of a better name, we call magnetism. This made the relations between the criminal and his captors rather agreeable. They liked him, but they did not relax any of their precautions.

One night, however, just before he was handcuffed to his detective guard, Shimburn secretly inserted the point of his plain gold scarf pin in the ratchet of the handcuff. The lock had not caught perfectly when snapped, and in the middle of the night Shimburn managed to open the handcuff, slipped it off his wrist and crept away naked from his sleeping companion. To complete his triumph, he entered the room of the other detective, stole his clothes and escaped with ease. The detectives were chagrined over this incident. The authorities were furious, but down in their secret hearts the police could not help but have a certain kind of admiration for this man who made thieves like Claude Duval and Jack Sheppard appear like bungling amateurs.

Byrnes sat in his office apparently oblivious to Mr. Shimburn's movements. But he was watching him like a hawk. After the sensational escape of the famous criminal, the inspector learned that he had gone to Belgium and was posing there as a baron. "Why not go after him?" suggested one of the headquarters men. "No," answered the great chief tactfully. "He is a gambler, going from one resort to another in Europe. Finally he became tired of the old world, shook its dust from his feet and returned to this country. He still knew it at the time, but in doing this he was leading up to his farrow in the burglary business. He had not been here very long when he robbed a small bank in the interior of New York state. This started the Pinkertons on his track actively. He went to Philadelphia, and a certain operation in that city put the Quaker City authorities on their guard. Frank Kelly, one of the greatest bank detectives in the world, got in pursuit of Shimburn.

In the meantime the superintendent of Scotland Yard and the chief of the Paris secret service were itching to lay hands on the clever German-American. Chief Inspector Byrnes, sitting in his office on Mulberry street, waited patiently for the big criminal to come into his outspread net. The importance of the man, therefore, may be understood when it is known that five of the greatest thief takers of the world were looking for him at the same time.

The climax came after his robbery of a comparatively small bank. Byrnes wanted to catch him with undisputed evidence of his guilt. He could command money so readily and he engaged such brilliant legal advocates that it might prove fruitless to arrest him merely on his suspicion or on the word of his bad record. So the inspector was eager for the sort of proof that would stand in a court of law. The rogue even pretended that he was not Shimburn, but that he was really a titled nobleman. The police waited for the slip which every thief makes. It came quicker than they expected. One morning Shimburn was discovered hurrying away from the neighborhood of a bank that had been robbed. The police arrested him on general principles. He was searched, but nothing of an incriminating nature was found on him. Before releasing him they telegraphed to Superintendent Byrnes. The inspector directed them to detain the prisoner and then hastened to give the baron his personal attention. The interview between the two men was a clash of keen minds. Neither one gained advantage.

After that Byrnes made a careful examination of the stuff that had been found in the baron's possession. It was very commonplace. In fact, it resembled the junk that a small boy carries in his pockets. There were a few dollars in bank notes, a small amount of change in silver and coppers, a time table on the Erie railroad, a bit of wax such as housewives use to polish their floors, a card case, a bit of string and a couple of fish hooks. Surely some one of these things contained the germ of a thrilling detective story. The local police said no. Byrnes examined each particular thing in his impassive way. The brown eyes seemed sleepy and indifferent. One thing after another was tossed aside. But when he reached the bit of wax his eyes brightened and he became the man of action.

"What is it?" asked one of his assistants. "It's the proof of the crime," he said tersely.

"But it's only a bit of ordinary wax," the chief smiled indulgently. "That's where you're mistaken," he said. "A close examination will show you that it differs from every other bit of wax that ever existed."

"How?" was the incredulous inquiry. "Well, for instance, it has the impression of the top of a screw."

"What next?"

"Next, the screw."

They did. They found it on the sidewalk between the police station and the bank. The screw fitted the lock plate of the door of the bank and the hole from which it was taken was filled with wax that corresponded with the bit found in Shimburn's pocket. Thus, the man who had made a fortune by his wits and outwitted the police of two continents, was finally betrayed by a piece of wax.

Sixteen years was the sentence imposed by the judge. So far as is shown by the records it ended the career of the burglar-baron, the man who had entertained royalty and who lived alternately in a prison and a castle.

The Pinkertons arrested Shimburn more than once. Chief Inspector Byrnes had the honor of entertaining him in the Tombs. Many other detectives claimed to have "taken" the great criminal at one time or another. Byrnes used to say smilingly: "There's glory enough to go around."

usually are more decorative than necessary. Simple dictation should be the ideal in will making.

J. E. Guinotte, judge of the probate court, in a lecture before the Kansas City School of Law, read a will that he said was remarkable for its brevity and directness. It was as follows:

"Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 12, 1888.—I start for Crystal, Colo., today at 11:30. In case I should die or be killed or in other ways switched for the other shore, heaven I hope, I want all my deposits in Clay and Funkhouser's bank $5,000.00 Five thousand dollars and all in the Citizens National Bank to be paid over to my wife Lucy B. Bowly this I do for her protection as we have no children.

"Witness—Ed. R. Stell, John G. Longdon."

Of course, the judge says, the foregoing might be improved upon in the matter of diction and punctuation.

After making your disposition of your property sign the document in the presence of two witnesses. These witnesses must then sign the paper in the presence of the testator and in the presence of each other. Three witnesses are better than two. No beneficiary in the will is a legal witness.

One day possessed of a fortune, the next almost penniless, was the experience of Lon M. Bales, who missed riches because his benefactress had but one witness to her will. Bales was employed by Mrs. Mary M. Bregg, proprietor of the Canadian Hotel and Employment agency, 1333 Grand avenue. He was engaged to be married to Mrs. Bregg at the time of her death last January. In her will she left to Bales a farm of 200 acres in Kansas, six diamonds, one pair of earrings, three race horses and $800. A brother-in-law of Mrs. Bregg, Richard E. Bregg, and other relatives, sued for her possessions. Witnesses testified that they had heard Mrs. Bregg say she had bequeathed her property to Bales. But her will was witnessed by only one person, and the court refused to admit it for probate. Bales was permitted to keep a watch that had been given him by his fiancée before her death.

Simple Wills the Strongest

Until there is a better mode of communication with those who have stepped into another existence, or until the law legalizes the elderly and young just wills and testaments will continue to be matters of moment in human affairs. Just why the document called a will should be so different from the other written form of expression is not clear, but a considerable literature of swan songs attests that will writing belongs to a distinct school of letters.

From the dark-age conception of death, probably, grew the idea that a man's will should smack of the mystery and obscurity of the passing on. And some hundreds of years later records show that man has lost little of the early notion of the uses and purposes of a will. In this age of simplified spelling, short skirts and general ideals of utility, one of the most archaic things is a recorded wish of a testator.

"Brevity is the soul of wit," Shakespeare said. But few who contemplate death do it in hilarious mood and many persons miss their own chance to be a humorist; and their wills are perfect exhibitions of how not to communicate a few intelligent facts on paper to intelligent people. It is a rule of physics that to multiply methods is to multiply the chance of error. The same could be said of will making. The simpler the will the less the chance for making a mistake that might invalidate the document. Many have just missed fortunes on account of technicalities that would not admit the wills to probate. Litigation and those who live on it, thrive on the wills that have been so drawn as to admit of finding a flaw.

Make the will concise and as brief as possible, they say. State clearly the property to be bequeathed and devised and the beneficiaries—those to whom the property is to be given. Herewith, aforesaid, to wit, etc.

Hampton Court, England, planted in 1709, while here in America there is a wide grapevine on the shores of Mobile Bay, within a mile of Daphne. A commonly known as the "General Jackson" vine, more than 6 feet in circumference at its base. There is a grapevine in Carpentaria, Cal., under which more than eight hundred persons may stand. Its trunk is eight feet in diameter at the base and it has borne as high as ten tons of fruit. It is said that this vine was planted in 1842.

The policeman, aroused the cook. "It's up to you," said the officer. "Ethelbert is a fine looking and he behaves like a gentleman. Do you want him?"

"We will keep him," said the housekeeper, "but what a funny way to dispose of a cat. Why didn't they give him away or sell him if they didn't want to turn him adrift?"

"No," said the policeman, "they thought he'd find a better home this way."

For every life a cat has there seems a way to find the animal a good home. One of the ways was sprung on a policeman who patrolled Ninety-seventh street the other morning at daybreak. In a basement area he noticed a tightly sealed willow basket bobbing and sliding down, apparently of its own volition in front of a basement door. "Baby," grunted the policeman, although even he could not see how a baby small enough to go into the basket could cause such violent commotion. Cautiously he raised the corner of the lid and saw not a baby, but a cat. Accompanying the cat was a note.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scars would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 22-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18, K. Boston.

WANTED TO KNOW.

"For Me—Now?"

The contrary proved vain and useless. He had made the remark because he believed it to be a true statement and she had fortunately been clever enough to see that he hoped it would be taken as a personal intimation of his attitude toward her. Argument was plainly useless and in a great and overwhelming silence they motored home at high speed, ignoring the beauty of the night and the voiceless things that breathed of love through the fragrant darkness.

Two days had passed slowly. He was too proud to make advances when he had been innocent of her charge against him. He had proven his love in every known way and he concluded that she was evidently grasping at any petty reason as an excuse for breaking her engagement to him.

Again the telephone rang sharply and Dr. Thrane answered.

"Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. Who wants me?" The doctor was hurt in the automobile accident? Who are they? I will be there in five minutes."

Somebody at the Hunts had been hurt. He summoned his sleepy chauffeur and was soon on the way, a fear growing in his heart that it might be Eileen. How would she receive him? Would she speak? A dozen questions presented themselves as he hurried on to his patient. It was more than probable that her brother Bob had been injured.

He hurried up the steps and found Mr. Hunt holding open the door. His worst fears were confirmed when the older man said, "Come in, Marshall. Eileen was thrown from a car. She fainted, but I think they have brought her around."

"Eileen wanted us to send for Dr. Gates, but of course we wouldn't take any chances for we didn't know how badly she might be hurt, so I had them telephone for you, Marshall."

"This is no time for personal feeling," said the young surgeon sternly, his heart aching at the sight of the girl's white face and twitching hands. "Some hot water, please."

"My ankle is hurt, Marshall," said the girl.

Thrane's Emergency Call

By A. MARIA CRAWFORD

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

The telephone bell rang insistently and Dr. Marshall Thrane threw down a book on abdominal surgery and turned indifferently to the instrument.

"Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. Automobile accident? Call Dr. Gates. I am very busy."

Thrane loved his profession and the lie about being busy was his first act of disloyalty. Although a young man of thirty, he was considered the leading surgeon, certainly the most successful one, in the city.

On this particular evening he was not disposed to help humanity, for the world had gone wrong and the bitterness of his first sorrow had made him morose and sullen. His engagement to the beautiful Eileen Hunt, three months before, had made him supremely happy. She seemed possessed of the tact and democratic attitude toward the masses that go to make a successful and helpful wife for a professional man. The quarrel had occurred two days before, yet he was still ignorant of the cause.

He had gone to the country club for dinner and he had thought to himself at the table that the girl had been blessed with every feminine attraction of beauty and charm. And now within two months of their wedding day, they had quarreled. Over what? Dr. Thrane closed his eyes and for the hundredth time tried to recall the exact conversation.

They had been discussing love. The topic was natural, for there had been a full moon shining on the river before the clubhouse and the soft strains of the waltz from Salome had reached them from the ballroom.

What was it he had said? Something about the moon making a man say foolish things, he remembered. Then she had grown strangely quiet and when he tried to penetrate her silence and learn the cause, she had told him that probably he had been foolish when he proposed to her; it was moonlight then, she reminded him coolly. All his protestations to

"All right, I'll make you comfortable in a few minutes," he assured her as he dropped a tablet into a tiny glass of hot water. "Close your eyes" he ordered as he sat down beside her and pushed back the sleeve from her round, white arm.

"I will stay with her for a while, Mrs. Hunt. Go and get some rest," he told her mother when he had bound up the girl's sprained ankle and made her forget her pain.

While Eileen slept Thrane idly picked up a magazine on a table near him. It fell open when a telegram had been thrust in. The words on the yellow slip seemed to leap into the mind of the man against his will. It was addressed to Eileen Hunt. "Expect to sail for Japan the first. Can you go with me? Write at once. Tom."

Thrane looked at the girl, then back again at the telltale slip of paper. She had precipitated their quarrel because it was necessary to red some excuse for breaking her engagement to him. Who was Tom?

At the same time that Eileen wakened, her mother came in, thanking Thrane profusely for allowing her a few hours of sleep. The young surgeon was merely professionally courteous when he declared that it was nothing more than he should have done under the circumstances. He hoped that his patient would rest well and he would be back in her room during the day, he said, and picking up his bag, without a word to the girl, left the room.

His quiet acceptance of changed conditions hurt the girl's pride. She had had a sufficient amount of time in which to regret her folly and she was ready for Thrane to pave a pleasant way for her confession, but the young surgeon came and went daily, coolly, impersonally professional.

It was late Sunday afternoon when Thrane came in to see Eileen. It had been a strenuous day for him and he dropped into a chair and sat silent, unmindful of the efforts of callers to interest him in the general conversation. In a short time he rose to go and Eileen beckoned to him.

"I want you to wait until these people go, please. I have something to say to you. It is your birthday, you know."

"All right," he said, "provided you won't open up the wound. It's too fresh a hurt and always will be for that matter to bear any unnecessary probing."

She knew then that his apparent indifference was a mask to hide his love and hurt pride, and her heart sank in her body for sheer joy.

"I promise," she answered lightly, "not to hurt."

When they were alone, he moved his chair so that he could watch her face in the light from the west window. She was going to tell him about Tom and her trip to Japan, he reflected, and braced himself for the ordeal.

"I had this made for you, Marshall," she said, and slipped a velvet case toward him along the arm of her invalid chair.

He opened it and there was a locket set with diamonds.

"For me—now?" he asked, wonderingly.

"Yes, open it," she commanded.

He pressed the spring and her own face smiled up at him.

"Is this rosemary—for remembrance?"

"Oh, Marshall, can't you understand? Don't you see?" cried the girl seeing the shadow on his face.

He looked up then and stumbled toward her blindly. "What does it mean?" he urged. "Two suffered enough, Eileen."

Her arms went round him at sight of his pain. "It means that I—that I can't give you up."

"But what about Tom and Japan?" he questioned, afraid of his new happiness.

"How did you know about that?"

"I read the telegram the night you were hurt. I opened a magazine and the words on the blank just flashed up at me. I didn't mean to read."

"Tom was my chum at college. She was named for her father."

"How I have hated the poor innocent!" laughed the man all weariness of the flesh dissipated by his changed spirit.

"This week has been terrible, Marshall. I wanted to die."

CANADA'S IMMENSE WHEAT FIELDS

THE ATTRACTION FOR THREE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAYS.

Last August there visited the Canadian west the vice-president of the largest individual hardware company in the United States. As his firm have a turnover of millions, and deal extensively with farm implements, this man took a deep interest in crop conditions in Canada, and on his return he embodied his findings in an article for the Hardware Reporter. This article should be of special interest to farmers.

The writer speaks of the importance of the spring wheat crop of Western Canada. He might also have spoken of the importance of the oat crop and also of the winter wheat crop, as well as barley. Winter wheat during the past few years has been a great success, and experiments have shown that it can be grown with success in almost any portion of the three prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. But apart from this, the spring wheat crop is the one generally grown, and all who know anything of grain, anyone who has had anything to do with markets, knows or has heard of the high character of this cereal and the splendid yields that are annually produced. Reproducing from this article—

"In a land of such great sweep, and of such difference in soil and climate there are many resources, but none are at present of the same overwhelming importance as the spring wheat crop. In the interminable prairie stretches of the northwest provinces it is the one absorbing topic of interest and of conversation during its growing and its harvesting, for upon its success or failure hangs the wealth or woe of a large part of the Dominion. Its influence extends far down into the United States, drawing thousands of farmers northwards with the lure of cheap lands, but likewise beyond the great lakes, even to the easy going maritime provinces, calling the flower of their young men to its opportunities. Development in these prairie provinces goes on at high pressure for everything hangs on the outcome of spring wheat. Success has emboldened the raisers of this one important crop, and each year there is further incursion into those northern fields that only a short time ago were regarded as Arctic wastes. The Canadian Northwest seems to be one of those modern agricultural examples set forth to drive the final nail in the coffin of that ancient Malthusian delusion that population tends to outrun the means of subsistence, since the only fear now among Canadian economists is as to the danger of overstocking the wheat market. Only about two and one-half per cent of possible arable lands in the northwest provinces is now under cultivation, and this year the crop promises to be close to 200,000,000 bushels, so that your imagination and your arithmetic can easily supply the answer as to the possible or even probable outcome."

During the months of July and August the weather was unfavourable and the production of a 200 million yield of wheat will not likely be realized, but even with this, the threshing reports now in hand show that the crop will be a splendidly paying one.

WANTED TO KNOW.

IT'S THE PROOF OF THE CRIME, HE SAID TERSELY.

ly by a man who had the brain and the touch to beat all known combinations.

That man, it was finally determined, was Max Shimburn, one of the most notorious and most successful criminals the world has ever known. The problem now was to catch Shimburn and directly connect him with one of the burglaries. The resources of thief takers fortunately are greater than those of the thieves. The life and adventures of this famous burglar was soon compiled and laid before the authorities for their guidance.

Max Shimburn was a German by birth and had come to the United States during the Civil war. He was a good mechanic and secured employment with one of the leading safe manufacturers of this country. He remained with the concern for several years and in that time became a most expert safe man. He had, especially, a perfect knowledge of the mechanism of combination locks.

Thus equipped, he left the company and began his career of crime. At that time the safes made by the concern with which he had been employed were in use in every part of America. With an ingenuity that was almost diabolical, he began operations on the safes of his own company. His pals had the greatest admiration for Shimburn and were fond of saying that he had elevated burglary from a trade to a profession. It might have been added that he was one of the few Shimburn made a second visit and this time there was a still smaller amount of money in the safe. His disgust was in proportion to his disappointment and he left without taking a penny. On the third and last visit, however, he made a big haul. There was something like $50,000 in money in the safe, besides a large quantity of negotiable bonds and other securities. This time he took everything in sight. The Pinkertons were put on the case, but the clever crook managed to elude them.

One year before the White Haven affair he broke into the Walpole Savings bank of Walpole, N. H., and stole a large sum of money and bonds. He was arrested at Saratoga with seven or eight bonds in his possession. The evidence was conclusive. He was promptly convicted and sentenced to ten years in the New Hampshire state prison. He accepted the verdict submissively, but on his way to prison he slipped away from his captors and no trace of him was obtained for a long while afterwards. The White Haven affair was just one year old when the Pinkertons took Shimburn on Broadway.

They proceeded to convey their prisoner to Pennsylvania where he could be tried for the White Haven offense. They knew that they had an ingenious and desperate criminal on their hands and that it would be unsafe to take any chances with him. To make assurance doubly sure he was handcuffed to two detectives. He was guarded every minute of the day and night. Among other things, he was compelled to sleep handcuffed to his guards. Each night his clothing was taken from him and locked in a separate room which was used by a Pinkerton man. The detectives were in no haste to turn him over to the authorities. They were anxious to obtain enough evidence against him to put him in prison for the remainder of his life. Accordingly he was kept at a hotel where the third degree and various other methods used by the police were utilized with more or less effect.

Shimburn was almost childlike in his demeanor toward his captors. He had a charming personality and talked engagingly. In other words, he possessed that quality which, for want of a better name, we call magnetism. This made the relations between the criminal and his captors rather agreeable. They liked him, but they did not relax any of their precautions.

One night, however, just before he was handcuffed to his detective guard, Shimburn secretly inserted the point of his plain gold scarf pin in the ratchet of the handcuff. The lock had not caught perfectly when snapped, and in the middle of the night Shimburn managed to open the handcuff, slipped it off his wrist and crept away naked from his sleeping companion. To complete his triumph, he entered the room of the other detective, stole his clothes and escaped with ease. The detectives were chagrined over this incident. The authorities were furious, but down in their secret hearts the police could not help but have a certain kind of admiration for this man who made thieves like Claude Duval and Jack Sheppard appear like bungling amateurs.

Byrnes sat in his office apparently oblivious to Mr. Shimburn's movements. But he was watching him like a hawk. After the sensational escape of the famous criminal, the inspector learned that he had gone to Belgium and was posing there as a baron. "Why not go after him?" suggested one of the headquarters men. "No," answered the great chief tactfully. "He is a gambler, going from one resort to another in Europe. Finally he became tired of the old world, shook its dust from his feet and returned to this country. He still knew it at the time, but in doing this he was leading up to his farrow in the burglary business. He had not been here very long when he robbed a small bank in the interior of New York state. This started the Pinkertons on his track actively. He went to Philadelphia, and a certain operation in that city put the Quaker City authorities on their guard. Frank Kelly, one of the greatest bank detectives in the world, got in pursuit of Shimburn.

Thread Does Sleuth Work

Milwaukee Merchant Devises a Clever Scheme to Get Rid of a Troublesome Shoplifter.

The manager of a local department store took an efficacious method of ridding himself of a troublesome petty shoplifter recently. The woman has been coming into the store and picking up a small remnant, spool of thread, thimble or other article that happened to be lying about, having little intrinsic value, but being nevertheless a source of annoyance to both the clerk and the management. Because of the position of the woman, it was undesirable to institute an action.

A few days ago the manager took a spool of silk from the case, fastened the loose end of the thread with a tack, and allowing a bit of slack, left it upon the counter. It was not long before his party arrived, and deftly dropping the spool into her shopping bag, started out. The manager detached the loose end and followed her up the street, a few yards in the rear. He trailed her into another downtown store, and as she was in a crowded array of bargain-seekers, approached her, calmly winding his thread and politely said:

"Madame, I'm trouble you for that spool of thread."

What followed can be more easily imagined than described. He got the thread and has not been troubled with losses since, nor have the other stores, so far as may be learned.—Milwaukee Free Press.

Life of the Grapevine.

There are some who contend that the life of the grapevine is longer than that of the oak. It is rare that a wild grapevine is found that has died of old age. Pliny mentions a vine 600 years old. There is a vine at

Hampton Court, England, planted in 1709, while here in America there is a wide grapevine on the shores of Mobile Bay, within a mile of Daphne. A commonly known as the "General Jackson" vine, more than 6 feet in circumference at its base. There is a grapevine in Carpentaria, Cal., under which more than eight hundred persons may stand. Its trunk is eight feet in diameter at the base and it has borne as high as ten tons of fruit. It is said that this vine was planted in 1842.

Finding a Home

For every life a cat has there seems a way to find the animal a good home. One of the ways was sprung on a policeman who patrolled Ninety-seventh street the other morning at daybreak. In a basement area he noticed a tightly sealed willow basket bobbing and sliding down, apparently of its own volition in front of a basement door. "Baby," grunted the policeman, although even he could not see how a baby small enough to go into the basket could cause such violent commotion. Cautiously he raised the corner of the lid and saw not a baby, but a cat. Accompanying the cat was a note.

"Please give Ethelbert a good home," he is a fine mouse. We are leaving town and cannot take him."

The policeman, aroused the cook. "It's up to you," said the officer. "Ethelbert is a fine looking and he behaves like a gentleman. Do you want him?"

"We will keep him," said the housekeeper, "but what a funny way to dispose of a cat. Why didn't they give him away or sell him if they didn't want to turn him adrift?"

"No," said the policeman, "they thought he'd find a better home this way."

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scars would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 22-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18, K. Boston.

WANTED TO KNOW.

"For Me—Now?"

The contrary proved vain and useless. He had made the remark because he believed it to be a true statement and she had fortunately been clever enough to see that he hoped it would be taken as a personal intimation of his attitude toward her. Argument was plainly useless and in a great and overwhelming silence they motored home at high speed, ignoring the beauty of the night and the voiceless things that breathed of love through the fragrant darkness.

Two days had passed slowly. He was too proud to make advances when he had been innocent of her charge against him. He had proven his love in every known way and he concluded that she was evidently grasping at any petty reason as an excuse for breaking her engagement to him.

Again the telephone rang sharply and Dr. Thrane answered.

"Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. Who wants me?" The doctor was hurt in the automobile accident? Who are they? I will be there in five minutes."

Somebody at the Hunts had been hurt. He summoned his sleepy chauffeur and was soon on the way, a fear growing in his heart that it might be Eileen. How would she receive him? Would she speak? A dozen questions presented themselves as he hurried on to his patient. It was more than probable that her brother Bob had been injured.

He hurried up the steps and found Mr. Hunt holding open the door. His worst fears were confirmed when the older man said, "Come in, Marshall. Eileen was thrown from a car. She fainted, but I think they have brought her around."

"Eileen wanted us to send for Dr. Gates, but of course we wouldn't take any chances for we didn't know how badly she might be hurt, so I had them telephone for you, Marshall."

"This is no time for personal feeling," said the young surgeon sternly, his heart aching at the sight of the girl's white face and twitching hands. "Some hot water, please."

"My ankle is hurt, Marshall," said the girl.

GRAND RAPIDS TRIBUNE

GRAND RAPIDS, WIS.

THE CARELESS SMOKER.

The average smoker is too careless in the manner in which he tosses burning cigar and cigarette butts and lighted matches about. The chances are that no damage will be caused, and he takes those chances. When a home, a business house, a city block, or even a large section of a city, is burned by a fire starting from a smoker's carelessness the smoker goes scot free. Is it not pertinent to ask why the law should punish a man for spitting on the sidewalk because some one might contract a germ disease as a result of his carelessness, while no punishment is fixed to deter him from throwing fire about, although millions of dollars' worth of property and many lives may be lost if the butt or match chances to fall where it can start a fire. The crusade of the anti-smoke contingent is not making much headway as a moral issue, a movement for the improvement of public health or an agitation against the foolish individual who is discourteous to those with whom he comes in contact, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. If it should result in the enactment of city ordinances making it a misdemeanor to throw lighted matches and butts about, and in state laws providing punishment where it is possible to fix the blame for a fire upon a negligent smoker, millions of dollars' worth of property and many lives might be saved. The habit of smoking cannot be ended by agitation.

When does slang cease to be slang? This is not a reasonable, but the inquiry of a correspondent who needs to know what length of life a word must have, how long must be used and generally understood, before it passes from being, as it were, an undesirable alien in the realm of our words and becomes naturalized. Every schoolboy knows that "the herring pond" means the sea. Most people would probably term it an Americanism referring to the Atlantic ocean. The only dictionary handy duty admits the herring-pond word, describes it as slang, and illustrates it with "to be sent across the herring-pond; to be transported," says the London Chronicle. "The word was used as long ago as 1763, when an English ambassador wrote from Calais to a secretary of state that he had "traversed the herring-pond after about ten hours' sail."

The burglar will always be about seeking for a chance to rob, and the police problem is how to reduce the number of these thieves to a minimum and make their work so dangerous that few will dare to undertake it. Carelessness and forgetfulness on the part of the housekeeper make the work of these gentry far easier than it would otherwise be. The police generally do the best they can, but they could do far better were not the burglar offered so many golden opportunities for the work they are always so ready to do.

A one-pounder mounted on a pin carriage is said now to solve the problem of firing at airplanes. How such a weapon could be effectively sighted remains to be shown. The conviction grows that efforts to prepare for the aerial battleship should be along the line of perfecting the sight, enlarging the caliber and lengthening the range of sharpshooter rifles, and training men for speedier and more accurate use.

PEKING IS UNEASY

MORE EDICTS BY CHINESE EMPEROR MEAN END OF MANCHU RULE.

PENSIONS TO BE STOPPED

General Situation Is Most Serious—Both Warring Factions Fear Massacre—Foreigners Leave Capital and Legations Strengthen Guards.

Peking, China.—The state of terror which has taken possession of the entire empire court was further shown by a long list of edicts supplementing the remarkable proclamation of the emperor. The edicts indicate that even though the dynasty survives, Manchuria rule is at an end. The transfer of cabinet offices to native Chinese is ordered.

The national assembly has voiced its approval of the throne's action. The revolutionists say "it is too late." A state of panic prevails in Peking, Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton, as well as nearly every small place in the empire, over the fear of massacre, the Chinese and Manchus regarding each other with mutual distrust and fear.

The transfer of all cabinet offices to native Chinese is one of the principal points in the edicts, and the throne gives the promise that hereafter "Manchurians and Chinese shall be regarded equally." This means that the system of pensions by which practically every Manchurian has been given money for years has been abolished, and the Manchus will have to get out and earn their living like any other Chinese. The edicts were a complete repudiation to the demands of the national assembly.

The general situation in perhaps more tense than at any time since the revolution began. The Manchus fear the invasion of the capital by the rebels, while the Chinese are in dread of possible massacre by the Manchus. The foreign legations and missions are besieged by persons clamoring for protection, the streets are filled with mobs carrying the valuables and money of the wealthy aristocracy to places of safety, and the Chinese are in a panic. The foreign legations are taking the most careful precautions against any possibility of attack. The guards have been greatly strengthened and there has been some fortifying of legation walls.

The Manchus, who, for the first time in generations, are cut off from their pensions, talk of massacre for revenge. There are 600,000 Chinese and 100,000 Manchus in the city of Peking. It is asserted among the natives that the emperor, P'ei Yu, is unwilling to lead the Manchus in their massacre.

Fears are entertained for foreigners in the province of Shansi, many of whom are Americans. A dispatch from Canton says that there is a turmoil of fear and excitement over the report that the Manchus will force a massacre of the Chinese in retaliation for the numerous edicts from the throne.

ROADS HIT BY COURT

SUPREME BODY'S DECISION VICTORY FOR COMMISSION.

Rules That All Carriers Must Comply With the Federal Safety Appliance Act.

Washington.—The United States Supreme court, in an opinion by Justice Van Devanter, gave broad powers to the interstate commerce commission in a sweeping interpretation of the federal safety appliance law. It virtually eliminates state railroad commissions from control of roads within the state.

The court held that the law is violated when a car, not properly equipped under the act, is used on a railway doing an interstate business, to carry shipments from one point in a state to another point within the same state. This takes cases of this character out of the jurisdiction of state railway commissions and forces the complete control of the railroads of the country by the interstate commerce commission.

The opinion of the court was given in a case brought by the government against the Southern Railway company in which it was alleged that couplers were out of repair on cars carrying shipments which originated in the state of Alabama and which were destined to points within the state.

POPE TO NAME THREE AMERICANS AS CARDINALS ON NOVEMBER 27.

TWENTY-TWO SEATS VACANT

Archbishops Farley of New York, O'Connell of Boston and Falconio of Washington Are Among Those to Be Elected.

Rome.—On November 27 when the consistory is held in the Vatican here Pope Pius will create seventeen new cardinals, and in this number will be Most Rev. John M. Farley, archbishop of New York; Most Rev. W. H. O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, and Most Rev. Diomedo Falconio, apostolic delegate in the United States at Washington.

The last consistory was held in December 1907, four cardinals being appointed at that time. Since then many vacancies have occurred in the sacred college by death, and now there are twenty-two seats of the newly unfilled.

Since 1907 the intention to hold a consistory has been announced from time to time, and on each occasion the consistory has been postponed for various causes.

The question of the appointment of another American cardinal has been under discussion a number of times. Archbishop Farley, Archbishop O'Connell and Archbishop Quigley of Chicago being mentioned. But on one occasion it was said the pope adhered to his opinion that the United States should not have more than one cardinal during the life of Cardinal Gibbons.

The proposed consistory in November will be the fifth held by Pope Pius X. On the death of Pope Leo XIII, there were sixty-four cardinals. During the last eight years Pius X. has created seventeen new cardinals, of whom two have died.

CONVENTION OF STATE LUTHERANS

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OPENS IN MILWAUKEE.

REV. ROTH DELIVERS ADDRESS

MORE THAN SIXTY DELEGATES FROM ALL PARTS OF WISCONSIN ATTEND SESSIONS OF THE LUTHER LEAGUE.

Madison.—The fourteenth annual convention of the Luther league of Wisconsin opened at Milwaukee in the Church of the Reformation, Rev. A. J. Roth, pastor. More than sixty delegates from all portions of the state were in attendance and the gathering was one representative of the younger element of the Lutheran church in the state, regardless of synodical connections or languages.

Rev. Paul H. Roth, chairman of the Milwaukee hospital, and the Layton league, delivered the convention address in the vesper services which marked the opening session. An informal reception followed. Rev. Roth welcomed the visitors and the response was by Rev. C. Koller, pastor of the Church of the Epiphany, and president of the Wisconsin Luther league.

The work of the convention began with the reports of officers and committees and the following papers: "Great Events in Luther's Life," Mrs. Conrad Hoffman, Madison; "Luther and Education," Miss Hannah Hooper, What Cheer; "Luther's Gifted Slaves," Mrs. J. H. Gaudet, Stoughton; "From the Reformation," Miss Amanda Haggis, Racine; and "How Can a Luther League Best Honor Luther?" Prof. Carl Juergens, west division high school, representing the Church of the Redeemer, Milwaukee. "The Junior League," Miss Edith Koller, Milwaukee; "Luther's Methods of Education," Miss Edith Koller, Milwaukee; "Conducting a Junior League," Miss Isabel Riehl, Epiphany, Milwaukee, followed by a discussion.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Women's Christian Temperance union ended its work at Milwaukee.

An impressive memorial service was held for thirty-four members who have died in the year past. Mrs. August E. Strong, Madison, read a prayer, which is the important part of this service.

The convention re-elected the following officers: President, Mrs. W. A. Lawson; vice-president, Mrs. Anna Warren, Stoughton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. W. Follett, Spencer; recording secretary, Miss Julia Hutchinson, Ashland; treasurer, Mrs. Ida M. Cook, Green Bay.

The program for the W. C. T. U. institute in Calvary church opened with a paper by Miss Elizabeth P. Gordon, world's W. C. T. U. superintendent, on "The Purpose of the W. C. T. U." Mrs. E. B. Kemp discussed various phases of the W. C. T. U. work.

An all-day prayer service was held in Grand Avenue Methodist church for those in charge of the national convention.

Officers Are Elected. About thirty members of the Wisconsin Rockwell-Crozier association attended its eighth annual meeting which was held at Milwaukee. President Julia Gulliver, Rockford college, in her address spoke of the beautiful new dormitory which has been added to the group of college buildings. She stated that the college is in a flourishing condition and that from present indications this will be the best year in the history of the college. The officers of last year were re-elected at the meeting. They are: President, Mrs. E. T. Holbrook; vice-president, Mrs. E. M. Herdgen; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. A. T. Van Scoy.

Positions Are Filled. Among the appointments announced by the Wisconsin State Civil Service Commission are: Civil and food inspectors, Stewart B. Cook, Cumberland; John E. Will Be No Change in Building Plans. The capital building commission will not change the plans of the new state house so as to provide for a larger assembly chamber. The present chamber in the west wing of the new capitol will continue to be used by the lower house of the legislature and a smaller chamber for the senate will be prepared in the south wing, which is now under construction.

The plans have been partly changed so as to provide for larger rooms for legislative committee work than those first adopted.

Berry, $10,000; incorporators, H. E. Berry, Max I. Katz and Louis (et al) continue to be used by the lower house of the legislature and a smaller chamber for the senate will be prepared in the south wing, which is now under construction.

The senate at the last session of the legislature reduced the number of its standing committees from seventeen to five, but increased the membership of each committee, thus requiring larger committee rooms than those of the legislature.

State Remits $940,235 to Taxpayers.

The state of Wisconsin, through the initiative of Governor McGovern, will remit to the taxpayers of the state $940,235 in the form of an amended tax levy.

Governor McGovern called a conference of state officers at which the history of the state's taxes were carefully gone over. The governor pointed out that nearly $1,000,000 could be remitted to the taxpayers, and the state would still have a big surplus in the general fund.

Secretary of State Froar will issue notices of the amended tax levy to the county clerks of the state, a copy of which will be before the several county boards when they meet on November 14, to make their tax levy.

The remittance of $940,235 means that instead of 1911, there will be a net reduction of $1,255, and there will still be left a surplus of $1,558,902.28 in the general fund of the state as against a surplus of $1,267,399.95 at the same date in 1910 and $947,479.17 in 1909.

The action permitting this remittance of nearly $1,000,000 was taken by Governor McGovern under section 2005 of the statutes which authorizes the governor, the secretary of state and state treasurer, or a majority thereof, "when the public interests require it" to "apply the surplus in the treasury or so much thereof as may be by them deemed proper as a portion of the state tax levy in each year and the balance thereof after deducting the amount above provided for shall be apportioned in the same manner as now provided for under the provisions of 1670."

Governor McGovern pointed out to the state officers that the remittance might be made and still leave a surplus in the general fund of almost $500,000 more than the 1910 surplus and more than $700,000 more than the 1909 surplus.

Notables Talk at Madison. William Allen White of Kansas, Senator Alfons Pomeroy of Ohio, Mayor Emilio Schick of Milwaukee, and others notable in the literary and literary circles were conspicuous figures at a large banquet which marked the closing of the first annual conference on civic and social center development at Madison. Senator Pomeroy, whose presence was especially noted, the average man's respect to himself in the political affairs of his country.

Making Socialists.

The Chicago Tribune has published some very interesting facts regarding the cost and selling price of anti-toxin. According to the statement of that paper, five thousand units can be manufactured for fifty cents. Allowing ten cents additional for the syringe, the cost is not only sixty cents. For that amount the drug dealer charges $7.50. At the average dose runs from three thousand units in very mild cases, to twenty thousand when the infection has spread to the nostrils. It is seen that the cost of the treatment runs from five to thirty dollars.

Such prices are out of reach of the average working man. If his child is stricken, he has no recourse but to sit by and see it perish, because a heartless combination in restraint of trade, insists upon charging him thirty dollars for medicine which can be produced for two dollars and forty cents. To meet that situation the city of Chicago and the state of Illinois have antitoxin at the rate of $1.00 per 5,000 units, and gives it away free to indigent patients.

This is socialism, of course, but whose fault is it? If the dealers had been content with a reasonable profit—if they had been animated by some of the same spirit which prompted the discoverer of this serum to give his discovery to the world unpatented—they would do a legitimate and reasonably profitable business in the sale of it. But when they undertake to hold up the people, knowing that an agonized parent would pay the last cent he had to relieve the suffering of his child, they went a step too far.

It would be well if other lines of trade would profit by the example which this affords. The public has stood exterior with a patience which is truly marvelous, but he is blind indeed who does not see that this patience is well nigh exhausted.

He Made Good.

Ocasina, S. D. Argus-Leader.

People in Washington express the conviction that Champ Clark and Wm. H. Taft will face each other next fall as candidates for the Presidency of the United States. The Speaker, in a sense, was put on trial when he was elevated to the post so long held by Mr. Cannon of Illinois. Many said: "If he can hold his force in line he will be the logical candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket." He held them in line, and it looks very much as if the Democratic party would not be able to refuse the nomination to the man from Missouri. It isn't hurting him any that William Jennings Bryan is understood to be friendly to him.

Railroads Make Rates for Big Land Show.

Every railroad leading into the Twin City has announced that special excursion rates will be put into effect Dec. 11 on account of the Northwestern Land Products Show which is to be held in St. Paul from Dec. 12 to 28. A fare and one third for the round trip will be the rate and excursion tickets will be sold at points within two hundred and fifty miles of the Twin City. Tickets will be good to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and will be good for return to and including Dec. 24.

This is the first time that a reduced rate has been granted for any land show and officers of the Northwest Development League say that the rate was only secured because of the public nature of the show to be given in St. Paul. Most of the land shows have been private enterprises, but the St. Paul or Twin City show as it is called, is an enterprise given by the seven Northwest states and the territory of Alaska.

Farm Education.

Education as a special preparation for farm life is a comparatively recent thing. Until within the memory of the present generation it was generally believed that any person could farm. If he had no qualifications for anything else, the tillage of the soil was naturally assigned to him. Farmers always designed the brightest of their boys for the law or medicine or the ministry, while the dullest was encouraged to follow the plow.

All this is now changed, at least in theory. It is conceded that a high degree of intelligence is required to cultivate the soil successfully as to be a successful physician. Indeed, farming as it is now taught is both a science and a business, and the successful farmer must understand a wider variety of things than almost any other professional man.

It must be confessed, however, that there is still a considerable margin between theory and practice. Unfortunately, too, the young man who has qualified himself to become a scientific cultivator often finds that his very qualifications remove him from farm life—the facts it more profitable to lecture, or demonstrate, or write for agricultural journals, than to till the soil.

It would be interesting to know the number of students of agricultural schools who actually stick to the land. It would no doubt be found that the majority of them get their money back in something besides farm work. At the same time, this is no argument against agricultural education. It merely shows how hard it is for the world to break away from tradition. More than one generation is required to transform a drudgery into a learned profession.—Wausau Record.

PITTSVILLE.

(From the Record.)

B. E. Walther, his brother and his little son, of Mosinee, spent the Sabbath with relatives here. There was a big feast at the Ducommun farm Saturday night in honor of the visitors. A few from the city were included with the invited ones and a big time is reported.

Henry Arntz expects to take a six weeks vacation before long, and while he is at liberty he will try out a new venture in the shape of an outfitting room proprietorship at Now Lishon which has been offered him. If it can be made to pay he will quit the St. Paul road and devote his time exclusively to this new venture. He has such a good fellow that all his friends will wish him all the luck possible in the new venture.

Doaks have been numerous this year—more so than in many years formerly. Flocks of a hundred or more are to be seen flying overhead every day and they all seem to light for the night near Dexterville. Possibly the wet weather of the past month has furnished them a good feeding ground near the Homok and Yellow rivers down there. Al Smith and Hans Lunde went down Saturday morning and brought home seven. A week previous Mr. Smith drove into the city with eleven.

Word has been received in the city that Wilson, who pitched ball for St. Louis last season, has hired out to the Winona later team town as a relay pitcher, and while he is not in the box will hold down outer garden.

E. J. Langhoff takes possession today of the Olinia building, recently vacated by the Record, as a restaurant and candy kitchen. He will also handle cigars and tobacco and fruit in season.

Big Show Coming.

—Three laughs a minute throughout the performance is what is promised amusement seekers at Daly's Theatre, Friday night, Nov. 10th, when the merry musical comedy "Busy Body" will be presented with George Sidney in the title role and a large and clever company headed by Carria Webber and the following well known fun makers, Dick Hame, Nick Hest, Frank Gibbons, Walter Webber, Leona Burrad and Lottie Liscord. Musical comedy of big proportions is a sign of the times and there appears to be a fierce struggle for supremacy going on all the while the majority of theatre goers keep in a receptive mood for entertainment of that character. A show with plenty of comedy action, intensified by lots of pretty music, and hand-some girls, brilliant electrical effects and a scenic environment of more than ordinary merit is what goes to make "Busy Body" one of the leaders in the musical farce-comedy line, and a treat is in store for the theatre patrons who are fortunate enough to witness this entertainment when it is presented in this city.

NEKOOSA

(From the Times)

The boat house is now lighted by electricity. During the past week W. J. McGrogan, electrician for the Nekosco-Edwards Paper Co., has installed lights in the boat house.

In the upper story he installed one Benjamin fixture with three 30 watt lamps. In the lower story are five 40 candle power lamps. These are all complete with fuses and switches.

He also put one light in front of the fire hose house, which will burn all night every night in the week.

John Varruth was badly burned about the face and head Monday morning. While starting a fire in the heating stove at Charles Melson's saloon, where he is employed, he poured coal oil on the kildrind, thinking there were no coals in the stove, stepped behind the bar and got a match, and as he opened the stove door the accumulated gas exploded, burning him as stated above.

A stranger in Nekosco the past two weeks would think that potatoes were the only agricultural product of this section of country—judging by the immense numbers of baskets brought to this market. Since the season opened about two weeks ago, the local buyers have shipped something like 40,000 bushels.

Martin Brandt, S. L. Stevens, Will Robinson and Wm. Hooper were at Stevens Point last Friday to attend the district convention of the I. O. O. F. lodges. The meeting was called to order and presided over by president S. L. Stevens.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Davis left Wednesday evening for Chicago. Mr. Davis went to purchase his holiday stock, while Mrs. Davis is visiting friends. He will return Sunday, but she will remain several weeks.

He has a family of four children, also a wife. Mrs. Muller did not come to Wood County with her husband as she received a message that her mother died, so she took the car for Milwaukee to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Muller will come to Wood County this week. They should make a success as they have plenty of good strong boys who are willing to work and Mr. Muller himself is a good man at any kind of work.

Goes Into the Carp Business

The state of Wisconsin is going into the "carp" business on a wholesale scale. State Fish and Game Warden John A. Shotts has announced that no more permits will be issued by the department to private individuals to sell carp, but that all the selling will be done under the direction of the state department, the receipts for the sale of carp to be turned over to the state treasurer for use in the general fund. It is estimated that the receipts for the sale of carp, which are shipped to eastern markets by the carloads, to be sold as canned salmon, will aggregate several thousands of dollars. The new policy of the state fish and game warden applies to all of the lakes in the state. The selling will be done by experienced men who will receive a salary for their services. The start of the selling campaign already is on at Lake Kegonsa. Carp are snared out of the lake upon the theory that they destroy game fish and must be taken from the lakes if the game fish are to be saved. Just how much selling will be done has not been determined. Mr. Shotts takes the position that the carp are the property of all the people of the state and if there is any revenue to be gained from taking them out of the lakes, the state is entitled to the money.

Another blow has been aimed at one of our time-honored customs, to wit, the rummage sale. The socialists of LaCrosse have asked the council of that city to pass an ordinance prohibiting rummage sales, claiming that it is one of the greatest spreaders of disease that has as yet been contrived by humanity. Maybe if the campaign against rummage sales spreads, a fellow will be able to find an old suit of clothes occasionally when the hunting season comes on.

From the reports received here in relation to George Sidney in "Busy Izzy" there are good and sufficient reasons to understand why the appearance at Daly's Theatre next Friday, Nov. 10th of this big musical comedy is being looked forward to with special satisfaction. Unstinted praise has been accorded everywhere to the large number of pretty girls, brilliant costumes, fine scenic effects and quality of the song introductions. An Important Ruling.
A ruling was made by Judge O'Neill last week in the case of the state vs. Konopacki constraining section 1567 of the laws of 1909, which part of said section is as follows: "Any person whatever who shall procure for or sell or give away to any minor, whether upon the written order of the parents or guardian of such minor or in any other manner whatsoever, the question involved being:

First—if A should invite guests to his home and passes around to his said guests any intoxicating liquor, and if any of his guests has a minor child present and A gives said minor child an intoxicating drink, he is guilty under said statutes, even though by consent of his parent.

The second proposition is—if A invites guests to his home and has intoxicating liquors poured out on his sideboard or table and the minor child of one of his guests, unbeknown to A, procures a drink of the intoxicating liquor, A would be guilty under this ruling, he being the cause of the minor getting the drink.

These were the only two points in the case of state vs. Konopacki, both of which were decided as stated above. After the ruling the only thing for defendant to do was to plead guilty, which he did.

It will be seen that by the above ruling the statute is very broad and persons giving parties, dances, etc., will be liable if they give away liquor in any form whatsoever to minors.—Stevens Point Gazette.

Rebuilding the Dam.
Stevens Point Journal.—The work of rebuilding the east portion of the Jackson Milling Company's dam, which was washed out to a great extent by the recent floods, is now in full blast. Peter Dieckhoff of Grand Rapids is doing the work and has a crew of about twelve men under him. A coffer dam is partly built and extends from the east shore to the first pier, about 130 feet out, and is about 30 feet above the dam. After this is completed the charred timbers of the old mill that was formerly located on the east end of the dam will be removed, as will also the dam itself for a distance of about 130 feet. The new portion will be of stone piers with what is called a needle gate between. These gates can be moved in times of high water, therefore lessening the danger of washouts in the future. If the weather is favorable the work will be completed this fall, if not it will be done in the spring.

Was a Good Show.
The "Sunny Side" of Broadway at Daly's Theatre on Friday evening was one of the best shows of the kind that has visited this city for some time. Max Bloom, the principal comedian, is able to produce a laugh every time he opens his mouth, and the audience was kept in a roar whenever he was on the stage. The rest of the troupe was also good.

No Room For Strangers.

Wisconsin State Journal.
A lady making a long journey, observed upon the train a man whose genial good nature cast a glow of warmth over everything. He spoke freely to all the passengers as though he had always known them, and before the journey was ended he had chatted with everybody on the train. Meeting the man later the lady said: "I have noticed how you speak to everybody. You don't seem to treat any person as a stranger."

Now, there's a spirit that might well put all dark things to rest. Considering the common fortune and the common destiny of mankind, all of us plying the same loom of fate, all of us walking the same little road between the cradle and the dreamless dust, with the same hopes and fears, regrets and longings, what a sad perversion of life's purpose it seems to withhold heart and hand from one another. What a spiritual waste in that silence which we build up between man and man.

Having to walk the same road, why not walk hand in hand.

Several Comets in Sight.
Astronomers, now, according to Dr. B. G. Aiken of Lick observatory, are observing two bright comets, one in the western sky shortly after sunset, the other in the western sky early in the morning.

The former, discovered by M. Belavsky September 28, is now travelling rapidly away from the sun," said Dr. Aiken. "At present, it is a conspicuous object for the naked eye observation having a very bright head and a tail about seven degrees long. It should be looked for a little north of the sunset point immediately after dark. It probably will remain visible for at least a week longer."

In addition to these two bright comets at least four others, visible only with telescopes, are known to be in the neighborhood of the sun. One of these, Biucke's comet, returns to the sun at regular intervals of about three and one-half years and has been observed at more returns than any other comet.

Values That Stand Alone in Quality and Low Prices

ONLY here such values exist. Nowhere else in the city can you find merchandise to approach—either in quality or price—to-morrow's offerings in men's fine wear. That is an aggressive statement. But you can prove it for yourself by investigation. To welcome comparison is a sign of strength. If we did not know the supremacy of these values we could not advocate such a practice.

Unquestioned Values in Fashionable Clothes

As an example of our greater value-giving we call attention to a line of Young Men's overcoats, Eiderheimer-Stein Fitform garments of kerseys, friezes, vicunas, chevots, Shetlands and heavers, shown in the season's most popular shades and colors, every coat splendidly lined and tailored.

Don't overlook the fact that our suit section is offering some exceptional values this week, both imported and domestic fabrics, tweeds in heather and Bannockburn weaves, cassimeres and chevots in brown, tan and gray shades, also plain and fancy blue seraes, fashion's newest creations.

ADVENTURES of the WORLD'S GREAT DETECTIVES

By George Barton

The Story of the Wax Impression

An Episode in the career of Thomas F. Byrnes the Great Inspector of Police

COPYRIGHT 1918 BY W. G. CHAPMAN.

On the night of the fifteenth of April, 1915, the Great National Bank of Middlebury, N. Y., was entered and robbed of a large sum of money. It was the climax to a series of audacious bank burglaries committed under circumstances that led the authorities to believe that all of them were the work of an especially successful gang of bank thieves.

Thomas F. Byrnes, the greatest chief inspector of police that New York has ever known, was in authority at that time and all of the facts in the case were laid before him. In the meantime complaints were coming in from other quarters. Robberies had been successfully pulled off at the Phoenix Bank of Phoenix, N. Y.; the National Bank of Pawling, Pawling, N. Y.; the St. Hyacinth Bank of West Parish, Ontario, and the Thompson National Bank of Thompson, Conn.

Superintendent Byrnes probably knew the methods of bank burglars better than any man in the United States, with the possible exception of William A. Pinkerton, and he began a study of the evidence in hand with the hope of determining the identity of the man who was directly concerned in this series of bold burglaries. Most bank crooks depend upon the use of dynamite and nitroglycerine to break open safes and vaults. The master hand in the cases under investigation used more refined means of accomplishing his purpose. The robberies had evidently been engineered, if not accomplished, personally by a man who actually learned his trade. He had served an apprenticeship with the safe company and took the knowledge thus acquired and ungratefully used it against his benefactors.

One of the curious side lights in this connection was the failure of the safe company. Shimburn's success in breaking into their safes drove the concern out of business. He knew the banks and financial institutions that had purchased safes from his old company, and in consulting his burglaries he always grudgingly gave these his preference. When it became known that the one-time expert of the safe company and the audacious safe breaker were one and the same person, the company found it practically impossible to dispose of any more of their products.

One of Shimburn's most brilliant achievements—his disreputable business career—was mentioned in this manner: "The robbery of the vaults of the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Company at White Haven, Pa., in 1897. He broke into the office at night and with a twist of the wrist managed to open the safe. There was, however, less than six thousand dollars in money there at the time. Shimburn expected to make a big haul and he was so thoroughly disgusted that he only took a few hundred dollars and left the balance of money in the safe. The effect of this may be imagined. The officers of the coal company promptly suspected that some of their clerks had been stealing, and it is said that one of the men was finally dismissed.

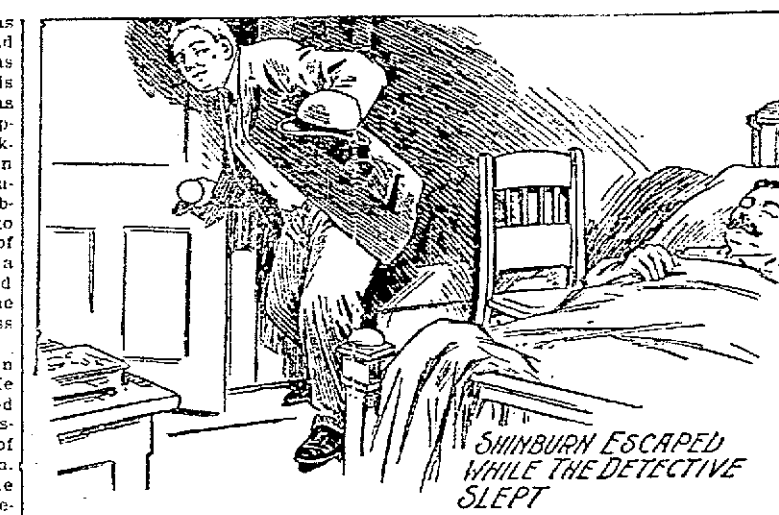

Superintendent Byrnes probably knew the methods of bank burglars better than any man in the United States, with the possible exception of William A. Pinkerton, and he began a study of the evidence in hand with the hope of determining the identity of the man who was directly concerned in this series of bold burglaries. Most bank crooks depend upon the use of dynamite and nitroglycerine to break open safes and vaults. The master hand in the cases under investigation used more refined means of accomplishing his purpose. The robberies had evidently been engineered, if not accomplished, personally by a man who actually learned his trade. He had served an apprenticeship with the safe company and took the knowledge thus acquired and ungratefully used it against his benefactors.

Shimburn ESCAPED WHILE THE DETECTIVE SLEPT

to water. He organized a gang to do business in Belgium, and planned to break the safe of the provincial bank of Vivere. His chief associate in this enterprise was a thief named Billard, who had worked with him for many years in America. In this case "the operation was a success, but the patient died." That is to say, they opened the safe successfully, secured the money and got out of the building, but were arrested before they could make a complete "getaway." Shimburn engaged high priced lawyers and made a desperate legal fight, but was finally sentenced to five years, which he served.

After that he became a gambler, going from one resort to another in Europe. Finally he became tired of the old world, shook its dust from his feet and returned to this country. He little knew it at the time, but in doing this he was leading up to his downfall in the burglary business. He had not been here very long when he robbed a small bank in the interior of New York state. This started the Pinkertons on his track actively. He went to Philadelphia, and a certain operation in that city put the Quaker City authorities on their guard. Frank Kelly, one of the greatest bank detectives in the world, got in pursuit of Shimburn.

In the meantime the superintendent of Scotland Yard and the chief of the Paris secret service were itching to lay hands on the clever German-American. Chief Inspector Byrnes, sitting in his office on Mulberry street, waited patiently for the big criminal to come into his outspread net. The importance of the man, therefore, can be understood when it is known that five of the greatest thief takers in the world were looking for him at the same time.

The climax came after his robbery of a comparatively small bank. Byrnes wanted to catch him with undisputed evidences of his guilt. He could not, however, get him in the act, and he engaged such brilliant legal advocates that it might prove fruitless to arrest him merely on suspicion or on account of his bad record. So the inspector was eager for the sort of proof that would stand in a court of law. The rogue even pretended that he was not Shimburn, but that he was really a titled nobleman. The police waited for the slip which every thief makes.

It came quicker than he expected. One morning Shimburn was discovered hurrying away from the neighborhood of a bank that had been robbed. The police arrested him on general principles. As he was searched, but nothing of an incriminating nature was found on him. Before releasing usually are more decorative than necessary. Simple diction should be the ideal in will making.

J. E. Guinotte, judge of the probate court, in a lecture before the Kansas City School of Law, read a will that he said was remarkable for brevity and directness. It was as follows:

"Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 12, 1888.—I start for Crye, Colo., today at 11:20. In case I should die or be killed or in other words switched for the other shore, heaven I hope, I want all my deposits in Clay and Pankin's bank $5,000.00 Five thousand dollars and all in the Citizens National Bank to be paid over to my wife Mrs. B. Bowly this I do hereby protect myself as we have no children.

"I, W. BOWLEY,

"Witness—Ed. R. Stell, John G. Longdon."

Of course, the judge says, the foregoing might be improved upon in the matter of diction and punctuation.

After making your disposition of your property sign the document in the presence of two witnesses. These witnesses should then sign the paper in the presence of each other. Three witnesses are better than two. No beneficiary in the will is a legal witness.

One day possessed of a fortune, the next almost penniless, was the experience of Lon M. Bales, who missed riches because his benefactress had been deceived by a will. Bales was employed by Mrs. Mary M. Brega, proprietor of the Canadian Hotel and Employment agency, 1233 Grand avenue. He was engaged to be married to Mrs. Brega at the time of her death last January. In her will she left to Bales a farm of 25 acres in Kansas, six diamonds, one pair of earrings, three race horses and $300.

Bales' brother-in-law of Mrs. Brega, Richard E. Brega, and other relatives, sued for her possessions. Witnesses testified that they had heard Mrs. Brega say she had bequeathed her property to Bales. But her will was witnessed by only one person, and the court refused to admit it for probate. Bales was permitted to keep a watch that had been given him by his fiancée before her death.

Hampton Court, England, planted in 1763, while here in America there is a wild grapevine on the shores of Middle Bay, within a mile of Daphne, Ala. known as the "General Jackson" vine, more than 6 feet in circumference at its base. There is a grapevine in Carpinteria, Cal., under which more than eight hundred persons may stand. Its trunk is eight feet in diameter at the base and it has borne as high as ten tons of fruit. It is said that this vine was planted in 1842.

What followed can be more easily imagined than described. He got the thread and has not been troubled with losses since, nor have the other stores, so far as may be learned—Milwaukee Free Press.

Life of the Grapevine.

There are some who contend that the life of the grapevine is longer than that of the oak. It is rare that a wild grapevine is found that has died of old age. Pliny mentions a vine 600 years old. There is a vine at

Thrane's Emergency Call

By A. MARIA CRAWFORD

(Copyright, 1917, by Associated Literary Press.)

The telephone bell rang insistently and Dr. Marshall Thrane drew down a book on abdominal surgery and turned indifferently to the instrument.

"Yes, this is Dr. Thrane. Automobile accident? Call Dr. Gates. I am very busy."

Thrane loved his profession and the book he held in his hand was his first act of duty. Although a young man of thirty, he was considered the leading surgeon, certainly the most successful one, in the city.

On this particular evening he was not disposed to help humanity, for the world had gone wrong and the bitter stress of his first sorrow had made him morose and sullen. His engagement to the beautiful Ellen Hunt, three months before, had made him supremely happy. She seemed possessed of the tact and demureness of the old-fashioned girl, and he had been fastened to her by the force of her personality and helpful wife for a professional man. The quarrel had occurred two days before, yet he was still ignorant of the cause.

They had gone to the country club for dinner and he had thought to be self at the table with the girl he had once loved. The young surgeon was merely professionally courteous when he declared that it was nothing more than he should have done under the circumstances. He hoped that his patient would not wait and he would look in on her soon.

What was it he had said? Some faint, foolish thing, he remembered. Then she had grown strangely quiet and when he tried to penetrate her silence and learn the cause, she had told him that probably he had been foolish when he proposed to her; it was moonlight then, she reminded him coolly. All his protestations to

THE ATTRACTION FOR THREE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAYS.

Last August there visited the Canadian west the vice president of the largest individual hardware company in the United States. As his first business was to look over the wheat fields of a farmer of millions, and double extensively with farm implements, this man took a deep interest in crop conditions in Canada, and on his return he embodied his findings in an article for the Hardware Reporter. This article should be of special interest to farmers.

The writer speaks of the importance of the spring wheat crop of Western Canada. The article also has spoken of the importance of the crop and also of the winter wheat crop, as well as barley. Winter wheat during the past few years has been a great success. It has been grown with success in almost any portion of the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. But apart from this, the spring wheat crop is the one generally grown, and all who know anything of grain, anyone who has his finger to the pulse of the grain market, knows or has heard of the high character of this cereal and the splendid yields that are annually produced. Reproducing from this article:

"In a land of such great sweep, and of such difference in soil and climate, there are many varieties of wheat, but none are at present of the same overwhelming importance as the spring wheat crop. In the intermediate prairie stretches of the northwest provinces it is the one absorbing topic of interest and of conversation during the growing and its harvesting, for upon its success or failure hang the hopes of a large part of the Dominion. Its influence extends far down into the United States, drawing thousands of farmers northwards with the lure of cheap lands, but likewise beyond the great lakes, even to the very golden gate of the Pacific, where the flower of the young men of the Dominion are ready to leave their homes to find opportunity. Development in these prairie provinces goes on at such a pace that for everything but the out come of spring wheat, success has emboldened the rulers of this one all-important crop, and each year there is further incursion into those northern fields that only a short time ago were regarded as Arctic wastes. The Canadian Northwest seems to be one of those modern agricultural examples set forth to drive the final nail in the coffin of that ancient Malthusian doctrine that population tends to outrun the means of subsistence. Canada can only fear now among Canadian economists as to the danger of over-crowding the wheat market. Only about two and one-half per cent of possible arable lands in the northwest provinces is now under cultivation, and this year the crop promises to be close to 200,000,000 bushels, so that your imagination and your faith in the possible or even probable outcome."

During the months of July and August the weather was unfavourable and the production of a 200 million bushels of wheat would not be a record, but even with this the threatening report coming to hand show that the crop will be a splendidly paying one.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and caused terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great relief would come off when I removed his shirt."

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a short time the sores had almost all disappeared, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies did not do all that is claimed for them, but they did a great deal more."

(Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 38, Boston.

Thread Does Sleuth Work

Milwaukee Merchant Devises a Clever Scheme to Get Rid of a Troublesome Shoplifter.

The manager of a local department store took an efficacious method of ridding himself of a troublesome petty shoplifter recently. The woman has been coming into the store and picking up a small remnant, spool of thread, thimble or other article that happened to be lying about, having little intrinsic value, but being nevertheless a source of annoyance to both the clerk and the management. Because of the position of the woman, it was undesirable to institute an action.

A few days ago the manager took a spool of silk from the case, fastened the loose end of the thread with a tack, and allowing a bit of slack, left

it upon the counter. It was not long before his party arrived, and deftly dropping the spool into her shopping bag, started out. The manager detached the loose end and followed her up the street, a few yards in the rear. He trailed her into another downtown store, and as she was standing beside a counter in the midst of a crowded array of bargain seekers, approached her, calmly winding his thread and politely said:

"Madame, I'll trouble you for that spool of thread."

What followed can be more easily imagined than described. He got the thread and has not been troubled with losses since, nor have the other stores, so far as may be learned—Milwaukee Free Press.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with a scene from Dorothy March in the opera box of Mrs. Missioner, a wealthy widow. As the opera progresses, Mrs. Missioner's attention is attracted by the handsome, well-dressed man in the front row, who is identified as the detective, Donnelly. The scene is set in a grand opera house, with the audience filled with people of various social classes. The opera is a dramatic work, and the audience is captivated by the performance. The scene is a classic example of the "opera box" scene, where the detective is often seen observing the proceedings from a vantage point that allows him to see the audience's reactions.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

The big man straightened abruptly. Jacobson's heels came down and her hands fluttered aloft. The catch in his voice, characteristic of him when in the presence of the rich, was brushed off by a burst of professional zeal. He recognized a situation that enabled him to play inquisitor in a home of wealth.

"Where were the jewels stolen from?" he asked.

"I don't know," said Mrs. Missioner. "When did you ask them?"

"About the time the jewels were stolen from the opera box," said Donnelly.

"Who was in the party?"

Mrs. Missioner told him. She did not mention the Oriental in the next box. It did not occur to her.

"Isn't there anybody you can think of?" pursued the big detective, "who could have taken them?"

"Nobody who would," answered Mrs. Missioner.

"Did anybody else have the combination of the safe?"

"One," responded Mrs. Missioner. She answered hesitantly, like a witness under hostile cross-examination, volunteering nothing. Donnelly seemed not to hear her. He was examining the safe again. He passed his hand over the door and its frame again, turned the handle that shut the bolts, noted their strength and smoothness, turned them back, and then, without warning, he pulled the door open. Mrs. Missioner's eyebrows went up.

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Missioner," he answered. "I think we'll talk to your secretary now."

CHAPTER IV.

"The Chief Wants to See You."

Ellnor Holcomb, tall, graceful, gray-eyed, stood framed between crimson portieres like a Venetian portrait. Her reflection in the mirror behind her was a study in contrast. The woman in the mirror was a study in contrast. The woman in the mirror was a study in contrast.

"What do you know about this Miss Holcomb?" asked Donnelly, squinting himself as if for a trial of strength with the widow and turning out his toes farther than he had before.

"I have known her many years," said Mrs. Missioner, quietly, adding with warmth, "She is a young woman of high character."

"Oh, she is, is she?" returned the sleuth. "And how, may I ask, ma'am, do you know that?"

"I say, I have known her many years," said Mrs. Missioner.

Donnelly held whispered consultation with his mate. Then he asked if he might question the widow.

"Certainly," said the widow. "But I should warn you that I cannot bring myself to suspect any of them."

"Everybody seems to be above suspicion," snapped Donnelly. "It's always the way, until we begin to get on the trail, and then everybody becomes suspicious. I think I'll question the servants, ma'am. Shall I have 'em in here?"

Mrs. Missioner bowed and sent her maid to summon her comrades.

"One at a time, please," said Donnelly. The first to enter was the housekeeper, a stout woman in a black gown with narrow white ruffing about her withered neck. She knew nothing of the jewels save that madam always locked them in the safe herself, unless Miss Holcomb was there to do it for her.

The answers of the other servants were equally uninformative. The butler, under butler, the second footman, pantry-boy, parlor-maid, chamber-maid, and kitchen maid, and the majestic Blodgett himself were interrogated persistently, minutely, doggedly, even bullishly, and in the end the net result of what they had to tell was zero. That is to say, as far as Mrs. Missioner and her friends and the diamond expert were concerned, Donnelly thought otherwise. Carson's mind was a blank.

"Are these all the servants?" asked the large detective.

"All at present," answered Mrs. Missioner. "My own maid is away on leave. Oh, yes, there's All."

"Is All the name of your maid?"

"No, All is a man—an Indian."

"And what's his job?" This aggressively.

"He is a courier."

Donnelly was puzzled.

"Where does he look after the transportation and baggage," Mrs. Missioner explained.

The detective stroked his jaw and whispered with Carson again.

"This advance agent of yours—this All—where is he?"

"Blodgett," called the widow, "send All here."

"I will try to answer."

"Ma'am," Donnelly persisted, "but my experience is you never can tell who you know in a case like this. Me and my side-partner have been sent here to recover your jewels and locate the thief, and if you don't let us do it in our own way, we can't be held responsible."

Ellnor then did something that was unaccountable to the widow who thought she knew her so well, and which rather startled Sands. She turned to little Miss March and, laying her hand on the young girl's shoulder, went unhesitatingly, Dorothy, putting her shoulder, stood looking happily at Mrs. Missioner.

One of those awkward pauses followed in which nobody seemed to know what to do. Sands stared hard at the floor. Ransome wriggled in his chair uncomfortably. Even Blodgett's curved features twitched for an instant. Mrs. Missioner gazed at Ellnor, plainly perplexed. Sympathy struggled slowly to the surface of her face. She went up to her secretary, and, with a look at the detective, she said, "Now this is all wrong, young lady," he said to Ellnor, bearing on the soft pedal as much as he could. "It isn't right for you to go on like this, you know. You'll get yourself all worked up and then you won't be able to answer our questions. Take my word for it, it's best for you to keep yourself in hand."

Ellnor could keep herself in hand while that raucous voice was thrust into her self-respect like a rusty bolt gripped as a polisher. She fought for self-mastery, but the shock was too much for her determination. Dorothy's sisterly comforting "only made her tears flow more freely. Her whole form quivered with staccato sobs. Carson, still on his little journey around the room, came full within range of Blodgett's right-angled gaze. As he sensed the form's expression, he started violently, and, stopping back swiftly, turned away in confusion. Not a muscle of Blodgett's other features moved, but his eyes seemed to reach for the detective.

Donnelly was rapidly recovering his place on the pedestal. Hands writhed in pockets, he rocked on his heels and looked at Ellnor pleadingly with his little eyes. The girl, in an interval between sobs, raised her head and saw that gaze. A slow smile swept her face. She detached herself gently from little Miss March, and, lifting that graceful head of hers higher, over higher, faced the sleuth with composure as startling as had been her loss of control.

"If you have anything more to ask, sir," she said in a low tone, "I will try to answer."

"Thanks," came the curt reply. "I knew you'd come around. You see, Miss Holcomb," burst from Sands in a thunder tone, "if I do come, you understand—Miss Holcomb." Donnelly pretended not to notice the interruption, but he did not address Ellnor by her first name again. But Carson seemed as perturbed as he had been under the malignant gaze of the motionless Blodgett.

"What were you doing in Maiden Lane the other day?" asked Donnelly, sharply.

"I haven't been downtown in weeks. The last time I went south of the shopping district was more than a month ago."

"That is true," said Mrs. Missioner hurriedly. "Miss Holcomb went to the Battery Trust company for me."

"Much obliged, ma'am," Donnelly was learning to show more deference to the widow. Carson had whispered to him something of her social importance. Yes, Carson, although he was only a neutral tint in the human color scheme, knew a few things.

"Was that the day you took the diamonds to Tiffany's?" queried the big detective quickly. "To have one of the small stones made lighter, you know."

Miss Holcomb's diadem had given place to dull wonder. Where had the man got his misinformation? Could it be he really thought—no, it was impossible. She had felt as if something suffocating was closing about her. She lifted one hand to her throat to force back the sobs that would come.

"I am completely confused by your questions," she stammered. "I do not know how to answer. What you say is so strange." She looked at the others with a world of appeal in those gray eyes. Astonishment, sympathy, affection, cynicism, mutely replied. Stretching both hands toward Mrs. Missioner, advancing with faltering steps, the victim of the detective's persecution cried: "Mrs. Missioner, is it possible you can think—do you even imagine I—oh, with a swift turn to Miss March, "Dorothy, Dorothy!"

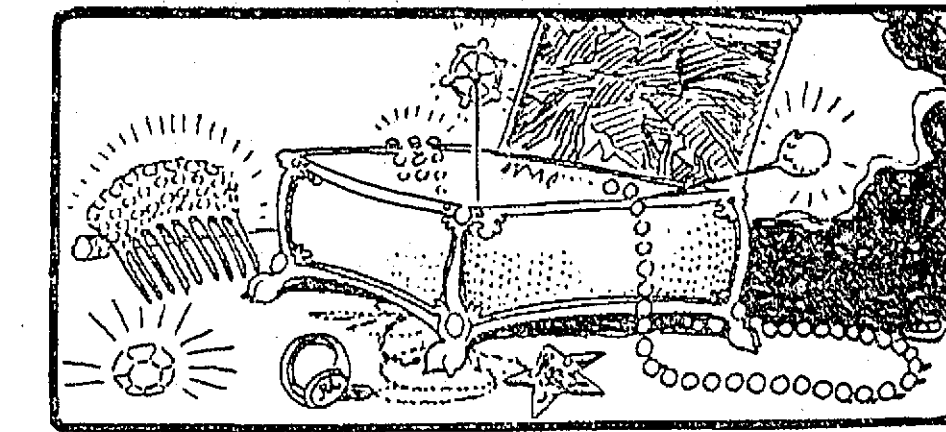

To the credit of little Miss March be it remembered she met Ellnor's second appeal with undiminished coolness. Mrs. Missioner, too, was kind, but her gentle "No, Ellnor," was not as reassuring as the loving pats Dorothy squandered on the bent shoulders of the distressed girl. Sands swore in his thoughts. His big fingers beat a gold penholder into wavy lines. Ransome, with alternate finger-tips, traced lines in his palms. Griswold turned his cigarette "round and round" with agile fingers and thumb. Blodgett's eyes seemed to lunge at the detectives.

"I guess Miss Holcomb isn't ready to tell all she knows yet," said Donnelly, meaningly. "While we're waiting for her to steady her nerves, we'll just have a look in her room."

Mrs. Missioner was about to negate the suggestion, but a glance at Ellnor's shaking form stopped her. She did not reply, and the detectives walked out of the room in silence. A look from the widow sent Blodgett stalking in their wake. The footman kept his eyes on Donnelly's turned-out toes as if calculating how many steps it would take to reach the door. The thick ankles with a sudden heave. Not until the central office men were at the end of the passage did the sobbing secretary start in great agitation toward the door. On the threshold she paused and turned slowly till she faced the group.

"Since they are going to search my room," she said, in a choking voice, "I wish you would all come there with me. I feel that—want you all come—please!"

The men hung back, but Doris and Dorothy joined her on the instant and together the three women followed the detectives into the lift. Blodgett backed from the car and stood staring at the detectives through the rose-tinted grill. A boy in quiet liveries threw the lever and the steel cage shot upward. The car stopped at the third floor and the little party proceeded to a room at the end of a softly-lighted corridor.

"Just what I said, you see," he exclaimed. "Nothing but trinkets and other little souvenirs—huh!—of old romances, perhaps. Eh, it's great to be a summer girl, Miss Holcomb. If only you had jewels like Mrs. Missioner's, you'd shine with the best of them. Gee, but that must be a beauty, that necklace, if the imitation is so pretty."

He stirred the contents of the box lid. Nothing else remained to be searched. He had ransacked the intimate sanctuaries of the girl's room. He felt baffled and sorely irritated. At the thought of failure, he thrust his fingers into the box with such violence that everything it held fell to the floor. Carson stooped to pick up the scattered jewelry, placing it in Donnelly's hand to be returned to the girl. After recovering several bits of jewelry he laid in his big colleague's greedy clutch a small, round object wrapped in silk tissue.

"Hello, what's this?" exclaimed Donnelly, rolling the fairly pale between finger and thumb. "You won't mind if I keep in the paper, young lady? Of course you won't. And this is only a—say, what the mischief is it? Oh, glory!"

Even Carson was startled into an exclamation. "Oh!" and the three women almost screamed. For, nestled in the folds of the tissue, its facets twinkling in the insistent green glow of the vacuum lights, flashed a diamond—an unmistakable diamond—which Mrs. Missioner and Dorothy and Ellnor recognized as one of the lesser gems from the Maharane necklace—much smaller than the Maharane diamond, but twice the size of an ordinary stone. And it was a diamond even a novice could tell was genuine!

All the blood left Ellnor's face. The muscles of her throat heaved and knotted as if she were strangling. She swayed for a moment, then took a long step toward the detective and, with quivering hands, Donnelly, holding the diamond to the light, was about to speak—in what words, what manner, one can guess. But the misery in the girl's attitude struck the triumphant grin from his face, and there was momentary compassion in the tone in which he said:

"We'd better go back to the library. I guess. Will you go with my side-partner, Miss Holcomb?"

Carson's advance to the secretary's side was checked by the violence with which she whirled toward Mrs. Missioner, again with outstretched hands. This time the widow was slower in meeting the appeal. She was stunned by the detective's discovery. All the finer sensibilities of her womanhood were benumbed. Astonishment, large and compelling, was all she could feel for the moment. Still, she took Ellnor's imploring hands in hers and stood motionless, listening to the girl's passionate entreaty not to believe the evidence of her eyes, not to believe her kindness could be outraged in such a way, not to believe that Ellnor for all the jewels in the mines of the world could be tempted from the high honor in which she had been reared. Glancing the younger woman's locked fingers in her own soft palm, she slipped her arm about Ellnor's waist and walked with her to the lift. Dorothy, crying almost childishly, controlled her voice and turned her long enough to beg Ellnor not to give way to such torturing emotion.

But Ellnor Holcomb, shivering, sobbing, widely beseeching, was oblivious to the silent watchfulness of the central office men, the covert glances from Blodgett's mask-like countenance, the amazed stare of the liveried youth in the elevator. All the way to the room in which Sands and Griswold and Ransome waited, all the way across the big English library to the room where before the fireplace stood the statue of the great statesman, she held her prayers to Mrs. Missioner to hold her fingers. That was the one thought that shaped her thoughts; that the woman to whom she owed the shelter of her later youth should not think her capable of such ignominious ingratitude. There was no slightest shade of appeal to the detectives, no regard for the conclusions others in the room might draw. But that Mrs. Missioner should give credence to all accusations that Ellnor had given the diamonds to Tiffany's, that was the one thought that shaped her thoughts; that the woman to whom she owed the shelter of her later youth should not think her capable of such ignominious ingratitude. The Chicago Tribune has published some very interesting facts regarding the cost and selling price of anti-toxin. According to the statement of that paper, five thousand units can be manufactured for fifty cents. Allowing ten cents additional for the syringe, the cost is not only sixty cents, but for that amount the drug is charged $7.50. As the average dose runs from three thousand units in very mild cases, to twenty thousand when the infection has progressed to the mortle, it is seen that the cost of the treatment runs from five to thirty dollars.

Such prices are out of reach of the average working man. If his child is stricken, he has no recourse but to let it die, or to let it die, because a heartless combination in restraint of trade, insists upon charging him thirty dollars for medicine which can be produced for two dollars and forty cents. To meet that situation the city of Chicago and the state of Illinois have antitoxin at the rate of $1.00 per 5,000 units, and give it away free to indigent patients.

This is socialism, of course, but whose fault is it? If the doctors had been content with a reasonable profit—if they had been animated by some of the same spirit which prompted the discoverer of this serum to give his discovery to the world gratuitously—they would not have sold it so cheaply and profitably to the rest of the world. But when they undertook to hold up the people, knowing that an agonized parent would pay the last cent he had to relieve the suffering of his child, they went a step too far.

It would be well if other lines of trade would profit by the example which this affords. The public has stood marvelous with a patience which is truly marvellous, but he is indignant when he does not see that this patience is well nigh exhausted.

He Made Good.
Oscar S. D. Argus, leader.

People in Washington express the conviction that Champ Clark and Wm. H. Taft will face each other next fall as candidates for the Presidency of the United States. The Speaker, in a speech, was put on trial when he was elevated to the post so long held by Mr. Cannon of Illinois. Many said: "If he can hold his force in line he will be the logical candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket." He held them in line, and it looks very much as if he will be able to defeat the nomination to the man from Missouri. It isn't hurting him any that William Jennings Bryan is understood to be friendly to him.

Railroads Make Rates for Big Land Show.
Every railroad leading into the Twin City has announced that special excursion rates will be put into effect Dec. 11 on account of the Northwestern Land Products show which is to be held in St. Paul from Dec. 12 to 23. A fare and one third for the round trip will be the rate and excursion tickets will be sold at points within two hundred and fifty miles of the Twin City. Tickets will be good to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and will be good for return to and including Dec. 24.

This is the first time that a reduced rate has been granted for any land show and officers of the Northwest Development League say that the rate was only secured because of the public nature of the show to be given in St. Paul. Most of the land shows have been private enterprises, but the St. Paul or Twin City show as it is called, is an enterprise given by the seven Northwest states and the territory of Alaska.

Farm Education.

Education is a special preparation for farm life and comparatively recent thing. Until within the memory of the present generation it was generally believed that any person could farm. If he had no qualifications for anything else, the tillage of the soil was naturally assigned to him. Farmers always despised the brightest of their boys for the law or medicine in the university, while the others were encouraged to follow the plow.

All this is now changed, at least in theory. It is conceded that a high degree of intelligence is required to cultivate the soil successfully as to be a successful physician. Indeed, farming as it is now taught is both a science and a business, and the successful farmer must understand a wider variety of things than almost any other professional man.

It must be confessed, however, that there is still a considerable margin between theory and practice. Unfortunately, too, the young man who has qualified himself to become a scientific cultivator often finds his very qualifications remove him from farm life. He finds it more profitable to lecture, or demonstrate, or write for agricultural journals, than to till the soil.

It would be interesting to know the number of students of agricultural schools who actually stick to the land. It would no doubt be found that the majority of them get their money back in something besides farm work. At the same time, this is no argument against agricultural education. It merely shows how hard it is for the world to break away from tradition. More than any other education is required to transform a druggist into a farmer.

PITTSVILLE.
(From the Journal.)

R. H. Wallbridge, his brother and two little sons, of Madison, spent two Sabbath with relatives here. There was a big feast at the Democratic farm Saturday night in honor of the visitors. A few from the city were included with the invited ones and a big time was reported.

Henry Arntz expects to take a six weeks vacation before long, and while he is at liberty he will try out a new venture in the shape of an eating room proprietorship at New Lisbon which has been offered him. If it can be made to pay he will quit the St. Paul road and devote his time exclusively to this new venture.

Delvin is such a good fellow that all his friends wish him all the luck possible in the new venture.

Ducks have been numerous this year—more so than in many years formerly. Flocks of a hundred or more are to be seen flying overhead every day and they all seem to light for the night near Dexterville. Possibly the wet weather of the past month has furnished them a good feeding ground near the Haulock and Yellow rivers down there. Al Smith and Hans Lunde went down Saturday morning and brought home seven.

A week previous Mr. Smith drove into the city with eleven.

Word has been received in the city that Wilson, who pitched ball for Salter's club last season, has hired out in the Wisconsin state team as a relay pitcher, and while he is out in the box will hold down center position.

R. J. Laughlin takes possession today of the Colvin building, recently vacated by the Record, as a restaurant and candy kitchen. He will also handle cigars and tobacco and fruit in season.

Miss Dolores Meehan of Stevens Point began a six months winter term of school here Monday.

F. Goldberg from near here loaded a cartload of household goods Saturday and shipped them to DuPere where he will go to farming the next season.

The Sunday school convention held here last week was a complete success. There was a large number of delegates present from all parts of the county and all enjoyed a good time. The local committee wishes to publicly thank those who so willingly assisted in the work.

Minnesota State Band to Play at Land Show.

Arrangements have just been made for the Minnesota State Band to play at the Northwestern Land Products Show to be held in the St. Paul Auditorium from Dec. 12 to 23.

The band is to give four concerts daily, two in the afternoon and two in the evening. This is the organization which has been furnishing the principal music at the Minnesota State Fair for years and is considered one of the best musical organizations in the northwest.

Besides the regular band concerts, some of the best soloists of the organization as well as others coming especially to St. Paul for the show, will present a number of soloists daily. The entertainment features at the Land Show will be numerous and all of the highest class, the band concerts alone being worth a visit to the show.

Big Show Coming.
—Three laughs a minute throughout the performance is what is promised amusement seekers at Dale's Theatre. Friday night, Nov. 10th, when the merry musical comedy, "Easy Easy" will be presented with George Sidney in the title role and a large and clever company headed by Carrie Webber and the following well known far makers, Dick Hamo, Nick Basil, Frank Gibbons, Walter Webber, Lucina Barrad and Lottie Eickard. Musical comedy of big proportions is a sign of the times and there appears to be a fierce struggle for supremacy going on all the while the majority of theatre goers keep in a receptive mood for entertainment of that character. A show with plenty of comedy action, intensified by lots of pretty music, and handsome girls, brilliant electrical effects and a scenic environment of more than ordinary merit is what goes to make "Easy Easy" one of the leaders in the musical force comedy line, and a treat is in store for the theatre patrons who are fortunate enough to witness this entertainment when it is presented in this city.

Making Socialists.

The Chicago Tribune has published some very interesting facts regarding the cost and selling price of anti-toxin. According to the statement of that paper, five thousand units can be manufactured for fifty cents. Allowing ten cents additional for the syringe, the cost is not only sixty cents. For that amount the drugstore charges $7.50. As the average dose runs from three thousand units in very mild cases, to twenty thousand when the infection has spread to the neck, it is seen that the cost of the treatment runs from five to thirty dollars.

Such prices are out of reach of the average working man. If his child is stricken, he has no recourse but to sit by and see it perish, because a heartless combination in restraint of trade, insists upon charging him thirty dollars for medicine which could be produced for two dollars and forty cents. To most that situation the city of Chicago and the state of Illinois buy anti-toxin at the rate of $1.00 per 5,000 units, and give it away free to indigent patients.

This is socialism, of course, but whose fault is it? If the dealers had been content with a reasonable profit—if they had been animated by some of the same spirit which prompted the discoverer of this serum to give his discovery to the world unpatented—they would do a legitimate and reasonably profitable business in the sale of it. But when they undertake to hold up the people, knowing that an agonized parent would pay the last cent he had to relieve the suffering of his child, they went a step too far.

It would be well if other lines of trade would profit by the example which this affords. The public has stood extortion with a patience which is truly marvelous, but he is blind indeed who does not see that this patience is well nigh exhausted.

He Made Good.

Oncoms, S. D. Argus-Leader.
People in Washington express the conviction that Champ Clark and Wm. H. Taft will face each other next fall as candidates for the Presidency of the United States. The Speaker, in a sense, was put on trial when he was elevated to the post so long held by Mr. Cannon of Illinois. Many said: "If he can hold his force in line he will be the logical candidate for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket." He held them in line, and it looks very much as if the Democratic party would not be able to refuse the nomination to the man from Missouri. It isn't hurting him any that William Jennings Bryan is understood to be friendly to him.

Railroads Make Rates for Big Land Show.

Every railroad leading into the Twin City has announced that special excursion rates will be put into effect Dec. 11 on account of the Northwestern Land Products Show which is to be held in St. Paul from Dec. 13 to 23. A fare and one third for the round trip will be the rate and excursion tickets will be sold at points within two hundred and fifty miles of the Twin City. Tickets will be good to either St. Paul or Minneapolis and will be good for return to and including Dec. 24.
This is the first time that a reduced rate has been granted for any land show and officers of the Northwestern Development League say that the rate was only secured because of the public nature of the show to be given in St. Paul. Most of the land shows have been private enterprises, but the St. Paul or Twin City show as it is called, is an enterprise given by the seven Northwestern states and the territory of Alaska.

Farm Education.

Education as a special preparation for farm life is a comparatively recent thing. Until within the memory of the present generation it was generally believed that any person could farm. If he had no qualifications for anything else, the tillage of the soil was naturally assigned to him. Farmers always designed the brightest of their boys for the law or medicine or the ministry, while the dunces were encouraged to follow the plow.

All this is now changed, at least in theory. It is conceded that a high degree of intelligence is required to cultivate the soil successfully as to be a successful farmer. Indeed, farming as it is now taught is both a science and a business, and the successful farmer must understand a wider variety of things than almost any other professional man.

It must be confessed, however, that there is still a considerable margin between theory and practice. Unfortunately, too, the young man who has qualified himself to become a scientific cultivator often finds that his very qualifications remove him from farm life—he finds it more profitable to lecture, or demonstrate, or write for agricultural journals, than to till the soil.

It would be interesting to know the number of students of agricultural schools who actually stick to the land. It would no doubt be found that the majority of them get their money back in something besides farm work. At the same time, there is no argument against agricultural education. It merely shows how hard it is for the world to break away from tradition. More than one generation is required to transform a drudgery into a learned profession.—Wausau Record.

PITTSVILLE.

From the Record.
B. E. Walchers, his brother and two little sons, of Mosinee, spent the Sabbath with relatives here. There was a big feast at the Dismuirch farm Saturday night in honor of the visitors. A few from the city were included with the invited ones and a big time is reported.

Henry Arntz expects to take a six weeks vacation before long, and while he is at liberty he will try out a new venture in the shape of an eating room proprietorship at New Lisbon which has been offered him. If it can be made to pay he will quit the St. Paul road and devote his time exclusively to this new venture. Heine is such a good fellow that all his friends will wish him all the luck possible in the new venture.

Ducks have been numerous this year—more so than in many years formerly. Flocks of a hundred or more are to be seen flying overhead every day and they all seem to light for the night near Dexterville. For the first time in the past month has the water under a good feeling ground near the Hamlock and Yellow rivers down there. Al Smith and Hans Lunde went down Saturday morning and brought home seven. A week previous Mr. Smith drove into the city with eleven.

Word has been received in the city that Wilson, who pitched ball for Salter's Colts last season, has hired out to the Wisconsin inter state team as a relay pitcher, and while he is not in the box will hold down center garden.

E. J. Laughoff takes possession today of the Colvin building, recently vacated by the Record, as a restaurant and candy kitchen. He will also handle cigars and tobacco and fruit in season.

Big Show Coming.

—Three laughs a minute throughout the performance is what is promised amusement seekers at Daly's Theatre, Friday night, Nov. 10th, when the merry minstrel comedy "Busy Day" will be presented with George Sidney in the title role and a large and clever company headed by Carria Webber and the following well known vaudeville artists, Dick Hume, Nick Basil, Frank Gibbons, Walter Weeber, Leona Burrad and Lottie Lincoln. Musical comedy of big proportions is a sign of the times and there appears to be a fierce struggle for supremacy going on all the while the majority of theatre goers keep in a receptive mood for entertainment of that character. A show with plenty of comedy action, intensified by lots of pretty music, and handsome girls, brilliant electrical effects and a scenic environment of more than ordinary merit is what goes to make "Busy Day" one of the leaders in the musical farce-comedy line, and a treat is in store for the theatre patrons who are fortunate enough to witness this entertainment when it is presented in this city.

NEKOOSA

The boat house is now lighted by electricity. During the past week W. J. McGrogan, electrician for the Nekosia-Edwards Paper Co., has installed lights in the boat house.

In the upper story he installed one Bangor lamp. In the lower story are five 10 candle power lamps. These are all complete with fuses and switches.

He also put one light in front of the first house, which will burn all night every night in the week.

John Vaurrath was badly burned about the face and head Monday morning. While starting a fire in the heating stove at Charles Melon's saloon, where he is employed, he poured coal oil on the kindling, thinking there were no coals in the stove, stepped behind the bar and got a match, and as he opened the stove door the accumulated gas exploded, burning him as stated above.

A stranger in Nekosia the past two weeks would think that potatoes were the only agricultural product of this section of country—judging by the immense numbers of bushels brought to this market. Since the season opened about two weeks ago, the local buyers have shipped something like 40,000 bushels.

Martin Brandt, S. L. Stevens, Will Robinson and Wm. Hooper were at Stevens Point last Friday to attend a district convention of the I. O. O. F. lodge. The meeting was called to order and presided over by president S. L. Stevens.

He has a family of four children, also a wife. Mrs. Muller will come to Wood County this week. They should make a success as they have plenty of good strong boys who are willing to work and Mr. Muller himself is a good man at any kind of work.

Goos Into the Carp Business
The state of Wisconsin is going in to the "carp" business on a wholesale scale. State Fish and Game Warden John A. Sholtz has announced that no more permits will be issued by the department to private individuals to sell carp, but that all the selling will be done under the direction of the state department, the receipts for the sale of carp to be turned over to the state treasurer for use in the general fund. It is estimated that the receipts for the sale of carp, which are shipped to eastern markets by the carloads, to be sold as canned salmon, will aggregate several thousands of dollars. The new policy of the state fish and game warden applies to all of the lakes in the state. The selling will be done by experienced men who will receive a salary for their services. The start of the selling campaign already is on at Lake Kegonsa. Carp are seized out of the lake upon the theory that they destroy game fish and must be to be saved. Just how much selling will be done has not been determined. Mr. Sholtz takes the position that the carp are the property of all the people of the state and if there is any revenue to be gained from taking them out of the lakes, the state is entitled to the money.

FULL REPORT OF W. H. MANNING.

There are some features in this wide side plan that will require more study, for special attention must be given to establishing conditions that will be fair to the public as well as the corporations and industries.

The playgrounds as indicated are so disposed as to give all the people a place of public recreation within walking distance of their homes. It is provided in the development of the modern town plan. It is likely that there are other localities near the ones indicated that will be quite as suitable, or that more numerous smaller plots may be preferable.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE EAST SIDE.

On the eastern side of the river the principal reservation and road system takes advantage of mostly two natural bluffs and spring fed brook valleys. These bluffs begin at the city's present city center, on the northeast to Robinson Park and Forest Hill Cemetery, and south-easterly away from the river, thence returning in a southwesterly course to the river at the city proper. Below these bluffs the land near river bank level that is occupied by business blocks and residences, with above the bluffs nearly all buildings are residences. From the base of these bluffs low springs at frequent intervals, and it is such springs that supply the drainage of the city's water system.

These bluffs are too steep for buildings or cultivation. In many places they are covered with trees that form the banks of foliage and sky lines as seen from many home lots and city streets. It is this bluff with springs and streams at its base that is indicated as a natural reservation from this city to the south to Robinson Park. From this park a double road, way might well be continued along the brook sides into the country westward. A broadening trail, to the city and other attractive broken land is made on each side of the North Western Railroad right of way.

The bluff top and bottom reservation, nearly almost their whole length give access to improved low priced property, much of this property being low priced because it is wet. An important feature of the project is to provide for the drainage of such land through an open channel within the reservation for most of its length that will be deep enough to drain all wet land along the line. Usually this channel will follow the line of streams that come within the takings indicated. At other points a new channel will be made to follow the line of streams. Sometimes a paved bottom may be needed on the bottom of the new channel to make it easy to keep it in order, but with planted banks and mowed walks it can soon be given the character and attractiveness of a natural water course which will be very attractive from the walks and roads along side.

Such an open course I would recommend here as well as in the proposed reservation along Grand Avenue on the westerly side because of the lower cost of construction and its attractiveness.

Such a permanent landscape passage through the town will invite the construction of homes, pleasure as they are now coming on the river banks. It will make an attractive driving and walking way to the town center on a short cut diagonal line from the northwest and southwest to the center of the town, thus saving time and giving pleasure to all citizens. Values thus added to present low cost land will justify owners in giving the land required for the roads and reservations, and the city in expending the necessary amounts for drainage and construction within them.

To make the connections to the Riverside Road from this reservation, the upper bluff top road is carried over the N. W. R. R. tracks at a railroad cut, and the bluff bottom road is carried under the railroad along the stream, where there is an open railroad trestle. Connection is made with the river shore drive through the proposed park on either side of the railroad right of way to the point where this river drive is carried under the railroad and southward to the shore at the bridge abutment. These divided crossings will make it practicable to do away with the present grade crossing.

At the proposed 800 line, extension roads are also carried along the side of the right of way to the river side drive where it is hoped that a new channel may also be made. The reservation roads proper where they cross the 800 line extension are brought together at the base of the bluff north of the Irving School, in order that they may be carried under the tracks readily, then beyond the present right of way a road is brought again to the bluff top. It is fortunate that such favorable opportunities exist for separating grades here, and it is to the advantage of both city and railroad that they be worked out.

A similar opportunity to separate grades and do away with an existing grade crossing is indicated along shore under the North Western Railroad bridge on the westerly side. It is true that there may be short periods of ex. treme high water when these shore roads will not be usable, but the drive to over track roads above high water is not far.

To provide for direct road lines through the town, the roads along railroad rights of way already referred to are made. Other roads are indicated to reach outlying sections having no direct approach to the city. I have also indicated the subdivision of the open land in district No. 3 and the broadening of Oak Street which seems to me quite as important as the broadening of Vine Street which will be the continuation of Grand Avenue over the bridge. Also several minor modifications to secure directness and safety, such as the cut off at the corner of 6th Street at the school grounds, and the making of a small triangular park next to lot 2 and 6, the continuation of 6th Street through to Franklin Street to give an adequate street connection here, also the continuation of 4th Street to Saratoga to take the place of a narrow passage and to do away with an old track that is not an attractive terminus to North Street as one looks through to the northeast.

BRIDGES.

The present river bridge when replaced ought to be of concrete because of its beauty, its permanence, and its low maintenance cost. Consider in this connection the beauty of the bridge to Belle Isle.

Future bridges must also be considered, and I have indicated one to follow parallel to the Northwestern Railroad bridge, and another parallel to the proposed 800 line bridge. It seems possible for the city to secure co-operative action with this city so that abutment piers may be built that will be sufficient for both the tracks and the highway. The next bridge required by the growth of the town obviously should be above the Consolidated dam.

STREETS.

Many residential streets that are not main thoroughfares are much too wide for convenience, economy, or beauty. Such city towns as Watertown, Mass., Lake Forest, Ill., and the State Highway Commission of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, and other states, make the paved or earth ways only wide enough to meet the actual requirements of traffic. The state highways are only made to do it. In the case of the lots along the street, there are no emergency. There are few streets in Grand Rapids where a greater width than this is necessary outside of those streets that are much used for business.

PLAYGROUNDS.

For playgrounds on the eastern side I do not recommend large tracts since there will be playground opportunities at intervals in the city also has a large amount of land about the Wilson Normal Training School and the High School, as well as large areas about other schools and some suitable land near the Court House and at the city center. I will, however, recommend that the city set aside for playgrounds some streets that run between blocks where the sites of the lots are along the street, because the streets running in front of the lots are sufficient to meet all requirements. I recommend this because a very large part of the blocks on the east side are so much smaller than blocks usually are in cities that it will be an economy and convenience to cut out the east of construction and maintenance of a portion of such streets, and put the money into public playgrounds or school grounds.

STREET TREES.

A very important feature of the detailed plans for the development of the city's plan will be the study for street tree care and planting. This should be done by a committee having full authority to act, for whose work it is entrusted to individual property owners it is impossible to secure that uniformity that is essential to the highest type of street beauty, of tree beauty, and tree health.

HOME GROUNDS.

The work of the individual counts immensely in improving the appearance of a city, for a large number of the lots are little else than quickly raised the standard of the town's aspect.

Maybe if the campaign against rummage sales spreads, a fellow will be able to find an old suit of clothes occasionally when the hunting season comes on.

No Room for Strangers.
Wisconsin State Journal

A lady making a long journey observed upon the train a man whose genial good nature cast a glow of warmth over everything. He spoke freely to all the passengers as though he had always known them, and before the journey was ended he had chatted with everybody on the train. Meeting the man later the lady said: "I have noticed how you speak to everybody. You don't seem to treat any person as a stranger."

Now there is a spirit that might well put all dark things to rest. Considering the common fortune and the common destiny of mankind, all of us playing the same loom of fate all of us walking the same little road between the cradle and the dreamless dust, with the same hopes and fears, regrets and longings, what a self perversion of life's purpose it seems to withhold heart and hand from one another. What a spiritual waste in that silence which we build up between man and man.

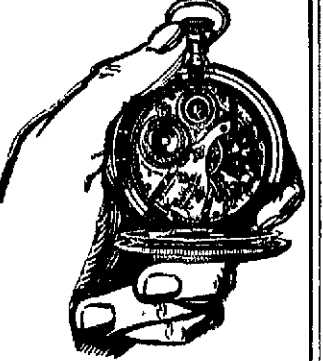

Having to walk the same road why not walk hand in hand.

Several Comets in Sight.
Astronomers now, according to Dr. R. G. Aitken of Lick observatory, are observing two brighter comets, one in the western sky shortly after sunset, the other in the western sky early in the morning.

The former, discovered by M. Bolawsky September 25, is now travelling rapidly away from the sun, said Dr. Aitken. At present, it is a conspicuous object for the naked eye observation having a very bright head and a tail about seven degrees long. It should be looked for a little north of the sunset point immediately after dark. It probably will remain visible for at least a week longer.

In addition to these two bright comets at least four others, visible only with telescope are known to be in the neighborhood of the sun. One of these Jack's comet returns to the sun at regular intervals of about three and one half years and has been observed at more returns than any other comet.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank of Wausau were in the city on Monday.

An Important Ruling.

A ruling was made by Judge O'Neill last week in the case of the state vs. Konopacki construing section 1557 of the laws of 1909, which part of said section is as follows: "Any person whatever who shall procure for or sell or give away to any minor, whether upon the written order of the parents or guardian of such minor or in any other manner whatsoever, the question involved being: First—If A should invite guests to his home and passes around to his said guests any intoxicating liquor, and if any of his guests has a minor child present and A gives said minor child an intoxicating drink, he is guilty under said statute, even though by consent of his parent. The second proposition is—If A invites guests to his home and has intoxicating liquors poured out on his sideboard or table and the minor child of one of his guests, unbeknown to A, procures a drink of the intoxicating liquor, A would be guilty under this ruling, he being the cause of the minor getting the drink. These were the only two points in the case of state vs. Konopacki, both of which were decided as stated above. After the ruling the only thing for defendant to do was to plead guilty, which he did. It will be seen that by the above ruling the statute is very broad and persons giving parties, dances, etc., will be liable if they give away liquor in any form whatsoever to minors.—Stevens Point Gazette.

Rebuilding the Dam.

Stevens Point Journal.—The work of rebuilding the east portion of the Jackson Milling Company's dam, which was washed out to a great extent by the recent floods, is now in full blast. Peter Diedrich of Grand Rapids is doing the work and has a crew of about twelve men under him. A coffer dam is partly built and extends from the east shore to the first pier, about 130 feet out, and is about 30 feet above the dam. After this is completed the charred timbers of the old mill that was formerly located on the east end of the dam will be removed, as will also the dam itself for a distance of about 130 feet. The new portion will be of stone, piers with what is called a needle gate between. These gates can be moved in times of high water, therefore lessening the danger of washouts in the future. If the weather is favorable the work will be completed this fall, if not it will be done in the spring.

Was a Good Show.

The Sunny Side of Broadway at Daly's Theatre on Friday evening was one of the best shows of the kind that has visited this city for some time. Max Bloom, the principal comedian, is able to produce a laugh every time he opens his mouth, and the audience was kept in a roar whenever he was on the stage. The rest of the troupe was also good.

Literary Criticism
They were discussing a certain play and a well-known critic said a laugh by remarking, "Well, her hair's not even if her books are not."

The world's most famous man in the corner made a notable note to the ally to turn a page, and at another party shortly afterward he carefully guided the conversation into literary channel.

EIGHT JILT FORTUNE

Thousand Dollar Bill Passed Around as $100 Note.

Several Business Men of Hyde Park and Englewood Do Not Know Value of Money When They See It.

—Exclusive Bill Trained.

Chicago. There are eight business men in Hyde Park and Englewood who do not know a thousand dollar bill when they see it. Light of them had it in their possession the other day.

A man passed it on to the next man as a $100 bill. The first to receive it deposited the bill to his account in the Guaranty Trust and Savings Bank, a large bank in the city.

He was told to take it to the bank and deposit it. The man did so and the bank told him it was a $100 bill.

EXHIBITS SEEN AT MINING CONGRESS.

WIPN's American Mining Congress opened in Chicago on October 21. There was a show on exhibits connected with the mining industry. Among these were the devices used by the government to cure crops, which has done such a work in recent disasters. Our photograph shows a member of the corps, equipped with the oxygen helmet.

FAMOUS SUFFRAGIST

Began Life's Battle Handicapped by Fate.

Early Struggles of Dr. Anna Shaw Head of the Suffrage Association, Who Won Success Against Many Discouragements.

Boston, Mass.—One of the ablest leaders connected with the woman suffrage movement in the United States is Dr. Anna Shaw, president of the National Suffrage Association. She started for Abilene college in Michigan, with just $18 in her pocket. She had earned that $18 by teaching school at $1 a week, and after she had earned it she had to wait one year for the dog tax to be collected to get her pay.

Dr. Shaw was born in England, like those other pioneers of the suffrage movement, the Blackwells. But her parents took her into Michigan 52 years ago when she was eight, having adopted her in Massachusetts on the way. They traveled days and days in an old-fashioned prairie schooner to reach their destination. Then they lived in a log cabin. The cabin was papered with scraps of paper from the papers and the letters in the advertisements and progressing to the editorials. When she got that far she could read anything, much to her father's disgust.

Miss Shaw spent four years in college and another four in the theological and medical school of Boston university. Her people were deeply opposed to the whole plan and told her they could do nothing whatever to help her. During that eight years she had only $94 that she did not earn.

She lived in an attic without any fire. In a Boston winter. She studied in bed to keep warm, her breath making frosty clouds upon the air. She had not food enough to satisfy hunger. She had not clothes enough to keep warm. Her stockings showed through holes in her shoes. She supported herself throughout the entire course by preaching and lecturing. But so many places did not pay her anything that she could average only $1.00 a week.

One day she was sitting on the stairs. She had sat down because she felt too weak to get to the top. A woman whom she knew slightly came along and asked her why she was sitting on the stairs. When she found out she went away and borrowed $94 from another woman and gave it to Miss Shaw with the advice that she was never to know from whom it came. That was the only help she had through her course. She repaid the money when she was graduated and never knew who lent it.

But about this time she acquired the warm friendship of Mrs. Persis Addy, a widow. During the final year of her course Mrs. Addy took her into her home, and though the student paid the board she had been paying, she had for it the comforts of a good home and the devoted care of Mrs. Addy. Mrs. Addy had planned to go to Europe and take Miss Shaw with her as soon as the latter should have finished her course. She died just before commencement, but in her will left Miss Shaw $1,500 for the specified purpose of taking a European trip. When she was planning this journey Mrs. Addy's father said to her:

"Now, you will spend that money and it will be gone forever. Instead of cash, let me give you two bonds worth $1,500. Then I will keep the bonds for security and lend you $1,500 on them. When you get to work you can repay me as convenient, and when it is all paid the bonds will be yours again."

She did this, and having acquired a certain sentiment about the matter, has done the same ever since. She has left the bonds on deposit and let the interest accumulate, and they have paid the actual traveling expenses of her three trips to Europe.

Miss Shaw took the medical course because during her theological course she had mislaid her work in Boston. She found, to use her own words, that she "did nothing the people wanted."

She did not want either her theology or her gospel. They wanted her in their material lives. She took the medical course in order that she might give them free medical treatment.

It was as a missionary doctor and preacher in the slums of Boston that Miss Shaw became convinced that there were certain defects in an all male government which called for political power in the hands of women. She had always believed in woman suffrage. Now she decided to work for it. She began to speak for the Massachusetts Suffrage Association and from that grew her national work.

Mixing Concrete. For mixing concrete there has been invented a spade with long oval holes in the blade, through which the finer cement will flow and give the surface a finer finish.

The Difference. "I say, wife, we don't want our girl Moll to marry a mollycoddle, do we?" "No, hubby, but she wouldn't object to a Moll coddler."

Obedience Not Due. There is no obedience due to sinful commands, nor to any other than what is lawful.—Mohammed.

Our Religion. We have just enough religion to make us hate, but not enough to make us love one another.—Dean Swift.

Kidney Trouble Is Very Deceptive

Few Realize They're Affected Till Danger Point Is Reached—Dr. Derby's Kidney Pills Work Wonders—Sample Free!

Kidney disease is much more common than most people imagine. Many sufferers do not know what's ailing them until the trouble becomes serious. Some of the signs may run into the head, diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, or even paralysis. It is a very deceptive disease, which first appears as far from the source of the trouble, and the sufferer makes the mistake of his ailment. But he has a very deceptive disease, which first appears as far from the source of the trouble, and the sufferer makes the mistake of his ailment.

Even the most reliable of doctors, when they are asked to examine a patient who is suffering from kidney trouble, will often find it difficult to diagnose the disease.
